PREFACE.

PERHAPS it may be fairly claimed for Nepos, that his history offers a subject more likely to appeal to the average pupil than the writings of any other Latin author of equal difficulty. Biography, if not spun out too fine, seldom fails to excite interest. Cæsar, probably indispensable in some part of the preparatory course, has no claim to possess the field to the exclusion of so interesting an author as Nepos. Hitherto in American schools the general practice adopted in Latin study has been to train the pupil in six weeks or six months for reading Cæsar, to thrust him into the study of Cæsar before he is ready for it and to keep him there until he becomes thoroughly tired of the famous general's campaigns and perhaps of Latin as well, and then to seek to revive him with a taste of Vergil's poetry. Now, however, there are indications everywhere of a healthy reaction against this practice, and the idea is fast gaining ground that the prose of the preparatory course should be more varied for the benefit of both teacher and pupil. As affording suitable material for such variety the "Lives of Nepos" have a special claim to recognition.

In the belief that at present Nepos cannot claim a great deal of time, if other authors are to receive due recognition, the present edition has been limited to nine of the "Lives," selected with special reference to their historical value. In the biographies of Miltiades, Themistocles, Cimon, and Alcibiades, we get glimpses of Athens and Athenian life and spirit in the most interesting period of the development of the state. In those of Pausanias and Agesilāus, Nepos shows us something of the peculiar Spartan government, and draws a contrast between the characters of two of the most famous Spartan kings. In the story of Pelopidas and Epaminondas we discover how it was that Thebes was enabled to secure a prominent place among the peoples of Greece. Lastly the story of Hannibal, dealing with his vow, his hatred of Rome, his marvelous ability as a general, the fear with which he inspired the Romans, is preëminently worthy to be included in any selection of representative lives from Nepos.

The text is, with a few minor alterations, that of Halm; the orthography is made uniform with that of the other books in this series. In response to many requests the quantity of long vowels has been indicated throughout the book. In determining quantities, and also in matters of etymology, Lewis' Elementary Dictionary has been for the most part, though not invariably, followed.

The synonyms placed at the foot of each page of text, and the word-groups printed just before the vocabulary, will, it is hoped, be of service in enlarging the pupil's vocabulary and training him in his earliest reading to cultivate the power of associating words of like origin.

The aim in the notes has been to supply needed information where Nepos is over-brief or in error, to explain real difficulties in syntax, and to add to the pupil's interest by giving illustrations of objects mentioned in the text. The editions of Nepos by Nipperdey (Lupus), Siebelis (Jancovius) and Karl Erbe have been drawn upon in the preparation of the notes.

References have been made to the grammars of Allen and Greenough, and Harkness. That these references will be found less frequent than in many elementary text-books is due to the editor's belief that constant references to the grammar often prove interruptions rather than helps to the pupils.

It remains for the editor to express his indebtedness to the editors-in-chief of this series, Messrs. William C. Collar and John Tetlow. Their assistance has been constant while the book was going through the press, and their suggestions and criticisms many and valuable.

INTRODUCTION.

Few details of the life of Cornelius Nepos have come down to us; even his praenomen is unknown. The date 100 B.C. is generally fixed upon as approximately the year of his birth, Ticīnum in Cis-Alpine Gaul (the modern Pavia in Northern Italy) as his birthplace. Early in life he removed to Rome, where he was educated. A contemporary of Cæsar and Cicero, he became well acquainted with the latter through their common friend Atticus. With this Atticus (Titus Pomponius Atticus), best known to us as the friend and correspondent of Cicero, Nepos became very intimate, and, entertaining for him the highest admiration, he imitated his tastes and manner of living. Like Atticus he held aloof from political life, filled none of the offices of state, and, being possessed of sufficient means, devoted himself to literary pursuits. The date of his death is uncertain; it cannot have been earlier than 29 B.C. and probably was somewhat later. He is said to have published the following works:

1. Chronica, probably a chronological summary which included the history of outside nations as well as of Rome.
2. Exempla; models for imitation, drawn from the early Romans, whose simplicity of life afforded a great contrast with the luxury of Nepos' own time.

3. A complete biography of Cato the Censor.
4. A life of Cicero; thought to have been written after the death of Cicero. Nepos was peculiarly fitted to undertake this task. His friendship for Cicero and Atticus and his access to their correspondence would have made the work an especially valuable one for us.
5. A work on Geography.
6. Dē Virīs Inlūstribus.

Of these all have disappeared except portions of the last, which was certainly his principal work, and was planned on a most comprehensive scale. He purposed to inform the Roman public about famous men chosen not only from Roman history, but also from that of the Greeks and other foreign nations. To this end he arranged his characters by classes, introducing immediately after a book containing descriptions of a number of foreigners, another containing similarly brief histories of distinguished Romans of the same class. Thus there followed one another in succession descriptions of foreign and Roman kings, generals, lawyers, orators, poets, historians, philosophers. All of this voluminous work is lost save one book, Dē Excellentibus Ducibus Exterārum Gentium, which fortunately we possess in its entirety, and two biographies from the volume Dē Historicīs Latīnīs, those of Cato and Atticus. We cannot with certainty reconstruct its table of contents, but with much probability Nipperdey in the introduction to his edition of Nepos suggests the following arrangement:

I. Dē Rēgibus Exterārum Gentium. II. Dē Rēgibus Rōmānōrum. III. Dē Excellentibus Ducibus Exterārum Gentium. IV. Dē Excellentibus Ducibus Rōmānōrum. V. Dē Iūris Cōnsultīs Graecīs. VI. Dē Iūris Cōnsultīs Rōmānīs. VII. Dē Ōrātōribus Graecīs. VIII. Dē Orātōribus Rōmānīs. IX. Dē Poētīs Graecīs. X. Dē Poētīs Latīnīs. XI. Dē Historicīs Graecīs. XII. Dē Historicīs Latīnīs. XIII. Dē Philosophīs Graecīs. XIV. Dē Philosophīs Latīnīs. XV. Dē Grammaticīs Graecīs. XVI. Dē Grammaticīs Latīnīs.

In this comparison or balancing of his countrymen with foreigners we should naturally look for some disparagement of the latter. But everywhere in the portions of his work that have come down to us, we are forced to recognize his fairness and impartiality. Even when a foreigner gains his glory at the expense of Romans, as was true of Hannibal, Nepos shows the highest admiration for his exploits and in no way attempts to belittle his achievements.

We find many mistakes and inaccuracies in his historical statements, but in view of the great task he undertook, of his haste to finish the work begun only late in life, and of his being the first Roman historian to use foreign authorities, this need not excite our surprise.

MILTIADES.

1 Miltiadēs, Cimōnis filius, Athēniēnsis, cum et antiquitāte generis et glōriā māiōrum et suā modestiā ūnus omnium māximē flōrēret eāque esset aetāte ut nōn iam sōlum dē eō bene spērāre, sed etiam cōnfidere cīvēs possent suī tālem eum futūrum quālem cōgnitum iūdicārunt, accidit ut Athēniēnsēs 2 Chersonēsum colōnōs vellent mittere. Cūius generis cum māgnus numerus esset et multī ēius dēmigrātiōnis peterent societātem, ex iīs dēlēctī Delphōs dēliberātum mīssī sunt, quī cōnsulerent Apollinem, quō potissimum duce ūterentur. Namque tum Thrāces eās regiōnēs tenēbant, cum quibus armīs 3 erat dīmicandum. Hīs cōnsulentibus nōminātim Pythia praecēpit ut Miltiadem imperātōrem sibi sūmerent: id sī fēcissent, incepta prōspera futūra. 4 Hōc ōrāculī respōnsō Miltiadēs cum dēlēctā manū classe Chersonēsum profectus cum accessisset Lemnum et incolās ēius īnsulae sub potestātem redigere vellet Athēniēnsium, idque Lemniī suā sponte face- 5 rent postulāsset, illī inridentēs respondērunt tum id sē factūrōs cum ille domō nāvibus proficīscēns ventō adversāriōrum captī, resistere ausī nōn sunt atque ex īnsulā dēmigrārunt. Parī fēlicitāte cēterās īnsulās, quae Cȳclades nōminantur, sub Athēniēnsium redēgit potestātem.

2 Ibi brevī tempore barbarōrum cōpiīs disiectīs, tōtā regiōne quam petierat potītus, loca castellīs idōnea commūniit, multitūdinem quam sēcum dūxerat in agrīs conlocāvit crēbrīsque excursiōnibus

3 Iīsdem temporibus Persārum rēx Dārēus ex Asiā in Eurōpam exercitū trāiectō Scythīs bellum īnferre dēcrēvit. Pōntem fēcit in Histrō flūmine, quā cōpiās trādūceret. Ēius pōntis, dum ipse abesset, cūstōdēs relīquit prīncipēs quōs sēcum ex Iōniā et Aeolide dūxerat: quibus singulīs suārum urbium perpetua 2 dederat imperia. In hōc fuit tum numerō 3 Miltiadēs cui illa cūstōdia crēderētur. Nam sī cum iīs cōpiīs quās sēcum trānsportārat interiisset Dārēus, nōn sōlum Eurōpam fore tūtam, sed etiam eōs quī Asiam incolerent Graecī genere līberōs ā Persārum futūrōs dominātiōne et perīculō. cum plērīque accēderent, Histiaeus Mīlēsius, nē rēs cōnficerētur, obstitit, dīcēns nōn idem ipsīs, quī summās imperī tenērent, expedīre et multitūdinī, quod Dārēī rēgnō ipsōrum nīterētur dominātiō: quō exstinctō ipsōs potestāte expulsōs cīvibus suīs poenās datūrōs. Itaque adeō sē abhorrēre ā cēterōrum cōnsiliō, ut nihil putet ipsīs ūtilius quam Hūius cum sententiam plūrimī essent secūtī, Miltiadēs nōn dubitāns tam multīs cōnsciīs ad rēgis aurēs cōnsilia sua perventūra, Chersonēsum relīquit āc rūrsus Athēnās dēmigrāvit. Cūius ratiō etsī nōn valuit, tamen magnō opere est laudanda cum amīcior omnium lībertātī quam suae fuerit dominātiōnī.

4 Dārēus autem, cum ex Eurōpā in Asiam redīsset, hortantibus amīcīs ut Graeciam redigeret in suam potestātem, classem quīngentārum nāvium comparāvit eīque Datim praefēcit et Artaphernem, hīsque ducenta peditum, decem equitum mīlia dedit, causam intērserēns sē hostem esse Athēniēnsibus, quod eōrum auxiliō Iōnes Sardīs expūgnāssent

THEMISTOCLES.

1 Themistoclēs, Neoclī filius, Athēniēnsis. Hūius vitia ineuntis adulēscentiae māgnīs sunt ēmendāta virtūtibus, adeō ut anteferātur huic nēmō, paucī
2 parēs putentur. Sed ab initiō est ōrdiendum. Pater ēius Neoclēs generōsus fuit. Is uxōrem Acarnānam cīvem dūxit, ex quā nātus est Themistoclēs. Quī cum minus esset probātus parentibus, quod et liberius vīvēbat et rem familiārem neglegēbat, ā patre
3 exhērēdātus est. Quae contumēlia nōn frēgit eum, sed ērēxit. Nam cum iūdicāsset sine summā industriā nōn posse eam exstinguī, tōtum sē dēdidit reī pūblicae, diligentius amīcīs fāmaeque serviēns. Multum in iūdiciīs prīvātīs versābātur, saepe in cōntiōnem populī prōdibat; nūlla rēs māior sine eō gerēbātur, celeriter quae opus erant reperiēbat, facile
4 eadem ōrātiōne explicābat. Neque minus in rēbus gerendīs prōmptus quam excōgitandīs erat, quod et dē īnstantibus, ut ait Thucydidēs, vērissimē iūdicābat et dē futūrīs callidissimē coniciēbat. Quō factum est ut brevī tempore inlūstrārētur.

2 ēmendāta, corrēcta. — 4 putentur, exīstimentur; est ōrdiendum, est incipiendum. — 5 uxōrem, coniugem. — 10 iūdicāsset, sēnsisset. — 11 industriā, diligentiā.

2 Prīmus autem gradus fuit capessendae reī pūblicae bellō Corcȳraeō: ad quod gerendum praetor ā populō factus nōn sōlum praesentī bellō, sed etiam
2 reliquō tempore ferōciōrem reddidit cīvitātem. Nam cum pecūnia pūblica, quae ex metallīs redībat, largītiōne magistrātuum quotannīs interīret, ille persuāsit populō ut eā pecūniā classis centum nāvium
3 aedificārētur. Quā celeriter effectā prīmum Corcȳraeōs frēgit, deinde maritimōs praedōnēs cōnsectandō mare tūtum reddidit. In quō cum dīvitiīs ōrnāvit, tum etiam perītissimōs bellī nāvālis fēcit
4 Athēniēnsēs. Id quantae salūtī fuerit ūniversae Graeciae, bellō cōgnitum est Persicō. Nam cum Xerxēs et marī et terrā bellum ūniversae īnferret Eurōpae cum tantīs cōpiīs quantās neque ante nec
5 posteā habuit quisquam: hūius enim classis mīlle et ducentārum nāvium longārum fuit, quam duo mīlia onerāriārum sequēbantur, terrestrēs autem exercitūs septingenta peditum, equitum quadrin-
6 genta mīlia fuērunt: — cūius dē adventū cum fāma in Graeciam esset perlāta et māximē Athēniēnsēs petī dīcerentur propter pūgnam Marathōniam, mīsērunt Delphōs cōnsultum quidnam facerent dē rēbus suīs. Dēlīberantibus Pȳthia respondit ut moenibus

Salamīna, partim Troezēna dēportant: arcem sacer- 5 dōtibus paucīsque māiōribus nātū ad sacra prōcū-randa trādunt, reliquum oppidum relinquunt.

3 Hūius cōnsilium plērīsque cīvitātibus displicēbat et in terrā dīmicārī magis placēbat. Itaque mīssī sunt dēlēctī cum Leōnidā, Lacedaemoniōrum rēge, 10 quī Thermopylās occupārent longiusque barbarōs prōgredī nōn paterentur. Iī vim hostium nōn sustiquam vellet movēret, noctū dē servīs suīs quem habuit fidēlissimum ad rēgem mīsit, ut eī nūntiāret

5 ad dēpūgnandum omnēs cōgerentur. Hāc rē audītā barbarus, nihil dolī subesse crēdēns, postrīdiē aliē-nissimō sibi locō, contrā opportūnissimō hostibus, adeō angustō marī cōnflīxit ut ēius multitūdō nāvium explicārī nōn potuerit. Victus ergō est magis etiam cōnsiliō Themistoclī quam armīs Grae-ciae.

5 Hīc etsī male rem gesserat, tamen tantās habēbat reliquiās cōpiārum ut etiam tum iīs opprimere posset hostēs. Iterum ab eōdem gradū dēpulsus est. Nam

Themistoclēs verēns nē bellāre persevērāret, certiōrem eum fēcit id agi, ut pōns quem ille in Hellēspontō fēcerat, dissolverētur āc reditū in Asiam
2 exclūderētur, idque eī persuāsit. Itaque quā sex mēnsibus iter fēcerat, eādem minus diēbus trīgintā in Asiam reversus est sēque ā Themistocle nōn
3 superātum, sed cōnservātum iūdicāvit. Sīc ūnīus virī prūdentiā Graecia līberāta est Eurōpaeque succubuit Asia. Haec est altera victōria quae cum Marathōniō possit comparārī tropaeō. Nam parī modō apud Salamīna parvō numerō nāvium māxima post hominum memoriam classis est dēvicta.

6 Māgnus hōc bellō Themistoclēs fuit neque minor in pāce. Cum enim Phalēricō portū neque māgnō neque bonō Athēniēnsēs ūterentur, hūius cōnsiliō triplex Pīraeī portus cōnstitūtus est isque moenibus circumdatus, ut ipsam urbem dignitāte aequiperāret,
2 ūtilitāte superāret. Īdem mūrōs Athēniēnsium restituit praecipuō suō perīculō. Namque Lacedaemonii causam idōneam nactī propter barbarōrum excursiōnēs, quā negārent oportēre extrā Peloponnēsum ūllam urbem mūrōs habēre, nē essent loca mūnita quae hostēs possīderent, Athēniēnsēs aedi-
3 ficantēs prohibēre sunt cōnātī. Hōc longē aliō spectābat atque vidērī volēbant. Athēniēnsēs enim duābus victōriīs, Marathōniā et Salamīniā, tantam glōriam apud omnēs gentēs erant cōnsecūtī ut intellegerent Lacedaemoniī dē prīncipātū sibi cum iīs certāmen fore. Quārē eōs quam īnfīrmissimōs esse

4 volēbant. Postquam autem audiērunt mūrōs struī, lēgātōs Athēnās mīsērunt, quī id fierī vetārent. Hīs praesentibus dēsiērunt āc sē dē eā rē lēgātōs ad eōs
5 mīssūrōs dīxērunt. Hanc lēgātiōnem suscēpit Themistoclēs et sōlus prīmō profectus est: reliquī lēgātī ut tum exīrent cum satis altī tuendō mūrī exstrūctī vidērentur, praecēpit: interim omnēs, servī atque līberī, opus facerent neque ūllī locō parcerent, sīve sacer sīve profānus, sīve prīvātus esset sīve pūblicus, et undique, quod idōneum ad mūniendum putārent, congererent. Quō factum est ut Athēniēnsium mūrī ex sacellīs sepulcrīsque cōnstārent.

7 Themistoclēs autem, ut Lacedaemonem vēnit, adīre ad magistrātūs nōluit et dedit operam ut quam longissimē tempus dūceret, causam interpōnēns sē
2 conlēgās exspectāre. Cum Lacedaemoniī quererentur opus nihilō minus fierī eumque in eā rē cōnārī fallere, interim reliquī lēgātī sunt cōnsecūtī. Ā quibus cum audīsset nōn multum superesse mūnītiōnis, ad ephorōs Lacedaemoniōrum accessit, penes quōs summum erat imperium, atque apud eōs contendit falsa iīs esse dēlāta: quārē aequum esse illōs virōs bonōs nōbilēsque mittere quibus fidēs habē-

3 retinērent. Gestus est eī mōs, trēsque lēgātī fūnctī summīs honōribus Athēnās mīssī sunt. Cum hīs conlēgās suōs Themistoclēs iūssit proficīscī iīsque praedīxit ut nē prius Lacedaemoniōrum lēgātōs 4 dīmitterent quam ipse esset remīssus. Hōs postquam Athēnās pervēnisse ratus est, ad magistrātūs senātumque Lacedaemoniōrum adiit et apud eōs līberrimē professus est: Athēniēnsēs suō cōnsiliō, quod commūnī iūre gentium facere possent, deōs pūblicōs suōsque patriōs āc penātēs, quō facilius ab hoste possent dēfendere, mūrīs saepsisse, neque in 5 eō quod inūtile esset Graeciae fēcisse. Nam illōrum urbem ut prōpūgnāculum oppositum esse barbarīs, apud quam iam bis classēs rēgiās fēcisse naufra-6 gium. Lacedaemoniōs autem male et iniūstē facere, quī id potius intuērentur, quod ipsōrum dominātiōnī quam quod ūniversae Graeciae ūtile esset. Quārē, sī suōs lēgātōs recipere vellent, quōs Athēnās mīse-rant, sē remitterent, cum aliter illōs numquam in patriam essent receptūrī.

8 Tamen nōn effūgit cīvium suōrum invidiam.
Namque ob eundem timōrem quō damnātus erat

2 Argos habitātum concessit. Hīc cum propter multās virtūtēs māgnā cum dignitāte vīveret, Lacedaemoniī lēgātōs Athēnās mīsērunt, quī eum absentem accūsārent, quod societātem cum rēge Persē ad Graeciam opprimendam fēcisset. Hōc crīmine absēns
3 prōditiōnis damnātus est. Id ut audīvit, quod nōn satis tūtum sē Argīs vidēbat, Corcȳram dēmigrāvit. Ibi cum ēius prīncipēs animadvertisset timēre nē propter sē bellum iīs Lacedaemoniī et Athēniēnsēs indīcerent, ad Admētum, Molossūm rēgem, cum quō
4 eī hospitium erat, cōnfūgit. Hūc cum vēnisset et in praesentiā rēx abesset, quō māiōre religiōne sē receptum tuērētur fīliam ēius parvulam adripuit et cum eā sē in sacrārium, quod summā colēbātur caerimōniā, coniēcit. Inde nōn prius ēgressus est quam rēx eum datā dextrā in fidem reciperet, quam
5 praestitit. Nam cum ab Athēniēnsibus et Lacedaemoniīs exposcerētur pūblicē, supplicem nōn prōdidit monuitque ut cōnsuleret sibi: difficile enim esse in tam propīnquō locō tūtō eum versārī. Itaque Pydnam eum dēdūcī iussit et quod satis esset praesidī
6 dedit. Hīc in nāvem omnibus īgnōtus nautīs ēscendit. Quae cum tempestāte māximā Naxum ferrētur, ubi tum Athēniēnsium erat exercitus, sēnsit Themistoclēs, sī eō pervēnisset, sibi esse pereundum. Hāc necessitāte coāctus dominō nāvis, quis sit, aperit, simī virī captus misericordiā diem noctemque procul ab īnsulā in salō nāvem tenuit in ancorīs neque quemquam ex eā exīre passus est. Inde Ephesum pervēnit ibique Themistoclem expōnit: cui ille prō meritīs posteā grātiam rettulit.

9 Sciō plērōsque ita scrīpsisse, Themistoclem Xerxe rēgnante in Asiam trānsīsse. Sed ego potissimum Thucydidī crēdō, quod et aetāte proximus dē iīs quī illōrum temporum historiam relīquērunt, et ēiusdem cīvitātis fuit. Is autem ait ad Artaxerxēn eum

10 Hūius rēx animī māgnitūdinem admīrāns cupiēnsque tālem virum sibi conciliārī veniam dedit. Ille omne illud tempus litterīs sermōnīque Persārum sē dēdidit: quibus adeō ērudītus est, ut multō commodius dīcātur apud rēgem verba fēcisse quam iī poterant, quī in Perside erant nātī. Hīc cum multa rēgī esset pollicitus grātissimumque illud, sī suīs ūtī cōnsiliīs vellet, illum Graeciam bellō oppressūrum, māgnīs mūneribus ab Artaxerxe dōnātus in Asiam rediit domiciliumque Māgnēsiae sibi cōnstituit. Namque hanc urbem eī rēx dōnārat hīs quidem verbīs, quae eī pānem praebēret (ex quā regiōne quīnquāgēna talenta quotannīs redībant), Lampsacum autem, unde vīnum sūmeret, Myunta, ex quā obsōnium habēret.

Hūius ad nostram memoriam monumenta mānsērunt duo: sepulcrum prope oppidum in quō est sepultus, statua in forō Māgnēsiae. Dē cūius morte multīs modīs apud plērōsque scrīptum est, sed nōs eundem potissimum Thucydidem auctōrem probāmus, quī illum ait Māgnēsiae morbō mortuum neque negat fuisse fāmam venēnum suā sponte sūmpsisse, cum sē, quae rēgī dē Graeciā opprimendā pollicitus esset, praestāre posse dēspērāret. PAUSANIAS.

1 Pausaniās Lacedaemonius māgnus homō, sed varius in omnī genere vītae fuit: nam ut virtūtibus ēlūxit, sīc vitiīs est obrutus. Hūius inlūstrissimum 2 est proelium apud Plataeās. Namque illō duce Mardonius, satrapēs rēgius, nātiōne Mēdus, rēgis gener, in prīmīs omnium Persārum et manū fortis et cōnsilī plēnus, cum ducentīs mīlibus peditum, quōs virītim lēgerat, et vīgintī equitum haud ita māgnā manū Graeciae fugātus est, eōque ipse dux 3 cecidit proeliō. Quā victōriā ēlātus plūrima miscēre coepit et māiōra concupīscere. Sed prīmum in eō est reprehēnsus, quod ex praedā tripodem aureum Delphīs posuisset epigrammate īnscrīptō īn quō haec erat sententia: suō ductū barbarōs apud Plataeās esse dēlētōs ēiusque victōriae ergō Apol- 4 linī dōnum dedisse. Hōs versūs Lacedaemoniī exsculpsērunt neque aliud scrīpsērunt quam nōmina eārum cīvitātum quārum auxiliō Persae erant victī.

2 Post id proelium eundem Pausaniam cum classe commūnī Cyprum atque Hellēspontum mīsērunt, ut ex hīs regiōnibus barbarōrum praesidia dēpelleret.
2 Parī fēlicitāte in eā rē ūsus ēlātius sē gerere coepit māiōrēsque appetere rēs. Nam cum Byzantiō expūgnātō cēpisset complūrēs Persārum nōbilēs atque in iīs nōnnūllōs rēgis propīnquōs, hōs clam Xerxī remīsit, simulāns ex vinclīs pūblicīs effūgisse, et cum iīs Gongylum Eretriēnsem, quī litterās rēgī redderet, in quibus haec fuisse scrīpta Thucydidēs
3 memoriae prōdidit : "Pausaniās, dux Spartae, quōs Byzantī cēperat, postquam propīnquōs tuōs cōgnōvit, tibi mūnerī mīsit sēque tēcum adfīnitāte coniungī cupit : quārē, sī tibi vidētur, dēs eī fīliam tuam rum pollicētur. Hīs dē rēbus sī quid gerī volueris, certum hominem ad eum mittās face, cum quō

5 conloquātur." Rēx tot hominum salūte tam sibi necessāriōrum māgnō opere gāvīsus cōnfestim cum epistulā Artabazum ad Pausaniam mittit, in quā eum conlaudat, petit, nē cui reī parcat ad ea efficienda quae pollicētur : sī perfēcerit, nūllīus reī ā sē nem cecidit Lacedaemoniōrum. Quō factō domum revocātus, accūsātus capitis absolvitur, multātur tamen pecūniā: quam ob causam ad classem remīssus nōn est.

3 At ille post nōn multō suā sponte ad exercitum rediit et ibi nōn callidā, sed dēmentī ratiōne cōgitāta patefēcit: nōn enim mōrēs patriōs sōlum, sed etiam 2 cultum vestītumque mūtāvit. Apparātū rēgiō ūtēbātur, veste Medicā; satellitēs Mēdī et Aegyptiī sequēbantur: epulābātur mōre Persārum lūxuriōsius, 3 quam quī aderant perpetī possent; aditum petentibus [conveniundī] nōn dabat, superbē respondēbat, crūdēliter imperābat. Spartam redīre nōlēbat: Colōnās, quī locus in agrō Trōade est, sē contulerat; ibi cōnsilia cum patriae tum sibi inimīca capiē- 4 bat. Id postquam Lacedaemoniī resciērunt, lēgātōs cum clāvā ad eum mīsērunt, in quā mōre illōrum erat scrīptum: nisi domum reverterētur, sē capitis 5 eum damnātūrōs. Hōc nūntiō commōtus, spērāns sē etiam tum pecūniā et potentiā īnstāns perīculum posse dēpellere, domum rediit. Hūc ut vēnit, ab ephorīs in vincla pūblica est coniectus: licet enim lēgibus eōrum cuivīs ephorō hōc facere rēgī. Hinc tamen sē expedīvit, neque eō magis carēbat suspīciōne: nam opīniō manēbat eum cum rēge habēre 6 societātem. Est genus quoddam hominum quod

4 Interim Argīlius quīdam adulēscentulus, quem puerum Pausaniās dīlēxerat, cum epistulam ab eō ad Artabazum accēpisset, eīque in suspīciōnem vēnisset aliquid in eā dē sē esse scrīptum, quod nēmō eōrum redīsset quī super tālī causā eōdem mīssī erant, vincla epistulae laxāvit sīgnōque dētractō cōgnōvit, sī pertulisset, sibi esse pereundum.

CIMON.

1 Cimōn, Miltiadis fīlius, Athēniēnsis, dūrō admodum initiō ūsus est adulēscentiae. Nam cum pater ēius līrem aestimātam populō solvere nōn potuisset ob eamque causam in vinclīs pūblicīs dēcessisset, Cimōn eādem cūstōdiā tenēbātur neque lēgibus Athēniēnsium ēmittī poterat, nisi pecūniam quā 2 pater multātus erat, solvisset. Habēbat autem in matrimōniō sorōrem germānam suam, nōmine Elpinicēn, nōn magis amōre quam mōre ductus: namque Athēniēnsibus licet eōdem patre nātās uxōrēs 3 dūcere. Hūius coniugī cupidus Calliās quīdam, nōn tam generōsus quam pecūniōsus, quī māgnās pecūniās ex metallīs fēcerat, ēgit cum Cimōne ut eam sibi uxōrem daret: id sī impetrāsset, sē prō 4 illō pecūniam solūtūrum. Is cum tālem condiciōnem aspernārētur, Elpinicē negāvit sē passūram Miltiadis prōgeniem in vinclīs pūblicīs interīre, quoniam prohibēre posset, sēque Calliae nūptūram, sī ea quae pollicērētur praestitisset.

2 Tālī modō cūstōdiā līberātus Cimōn celeriter ad prīncipātum pervēnit. Habēbat enim satis ēloquentiae, summam līberālitātem, māgnam prūdentiam cum iūris cīvīlis tum reī mīlitāris, quod cum patre ā puerō in exercitibus fuerat versātus. Itaque hīc et populum urbānum in suā tenuit potestāte et apud 2 exercitum plūrimum valuit auctōritāte. Prīmum imperātor apud flūmen Strȳmona māgnās cōpiās Thrācum fugāvit, oppidum Amphipolim cōnstituit eōque decem mīlia Athēniēnsium in colōniam mīsit.
Īdem iterum apud Mycalēn Cypriōrum et Phoenīcum ducentārum nāvium classem dēvīctam cēpit 3 eōdemque diē parī fōrtūnā in terrā ūsus est. Nam-que hostium nāvibus captīs statim ex classe cōpiās suās ēdūxit barbarōrumque māximam vim ūnō con-4 cursū prōstrāvit. Quā vīctōriā māgnā praedā potitus cum domum reverterētur, quod iam nōnnūllae īnsulae propter acerbitātem imperī dēfēcerant, bene animātās cōnfīrmāvit, aliēnātās ad officium redīre 5 coēgit. Scȳrum, quam eō tempore Dolopēs incolē-bant, quod contumācius sē gesserant, vacuēfēcit, sessōrēs veterēs urbe īnsulāque ēiēcit, agrōs cīvibus dīvīsit. Thasiōs opulentiā frētōs suō adventū frēgit.
Hīs ex manubiīs arx Athēnārum, quā ad merīdiem vergit, est ōrnāta.

3 Quibus rēbus cum ūnus in cīvitāte māximē flōrēret, incidit in eandem invidiam quam pater suus cēterīque Athēniēnsium prīncipēs: nam testārum suffrāgiīs, quod illī ὀστρακισμόν vocant, decem annō-
2 rum exsiliō multātus est. Cūius factī celerius Athēniēnsēs quam ipsum paenituit. Nam cum ille animō fortī invidiae ingrātōrum cīvium cessisset bellumque Lacedaemoniī Athēniēnsibus indīxissent, cōnfestim nōtae ēius virtūtis dēsīderium cōnsecūtum est.
3 Itaque post annum quīntum, quam expulsus erat, in patriam revocātus est. Ille, quod hospitiō Lacedaemoniōrum ūtēbātur, satius exīstimāns concēdere quam armīs contendere, Lacedaemonem suā sponte est profectus pācemque inter duās potentissimās cīvitā-
4 tēs conciliāvit. Post, neque ita multō, Cyprum cum ducentīs nāvibus imperātor mīssus, cum ēius māiōrem partem īnsulae dēvīcisset, in morbum implicitus in oppidō Citiō est mortuus.

4 Hunc Athēniēnsēs nōn sōlum in bellō, sed etiam in pāce diū dēsīderāvērunt. Fuit enim tantā līberālitāte, cum complūribus locīs praedia hortōsque habēret, ut numquam in iīs custōdem imposuerit frūctūs servandī grātiā, nē quis impedīrētur quō minus eīs rēbus quibus quisque vellet, fruerētur.

Nūllī fidēs ēius, nūllī opera, nūllī rēs familiāris dēfuit : multōs locuplētāvit, complūrēs pauperēs mortuōs, quī unde efferrentur nōn relīquissent,

ALCIBIADES.

Nātus in amplissimā cīvitāte summō genere, omnium aetātis suae multō fōrmōsissimus, ad omnēs rēs aptus cōnsilīque plēnus (namque imperātor fuit summus et marī et terrā), disertus, ut in prīmīs dīcendō valēret, quod tanta erat commendātiō ōris atque ōrātiōnis, ut nēmō eī posset resistere ; dīves ;

Id ille intuēns neque īgnōrāns cīvium suōrum cōnsimum ratus impendentem ēvitāre tempestātem, clam sē ab cūstōdibus subdūxit et inde prīmum Ēlidem, dein Thēbās vēnit. Postquam autem sē capitis damnātum bonīs pūblicātīs audīvit, et, id quod ūsū vēnerat, Eumolpidās sacerdōtēs ā populō coāctōs ut sē dēvovērent, ēiusque dēvōtiōnis quō testātior esset memoria, exemplum in pīlā lapideā incīsum esse positum in pūblicō, Lacedaemonem dēmigrāvit. 6 Ibi, ut ipse praedicāre cōnsuērat, nōn adversus patriam, sed inimīcōs suōs bellum gessit, quod īidem hostēs essent cīvitātī: nam cum intellegerent sē plūrimum prōdesse posse reī pūblicae, ex eā ēiēcisse plūsque īrae suae quam ūtilitātī commūnī pāruisse. 7 Itaque hūius cōnsiliō Lacedaemoniī cum Persē rēge amīcitiam fēcērunt, dein Decelēam in Atticā mūniērunt praesidiōque ibi perpetuō positō in obsidiōne Athēnās tenuērunt. Ēiusdem operā Iōniam ā societāte āvertērunt Athēniēnsium. Quō factō multō superiōrēs bellō esse coepērunt.

5 Neque vērō hīs rēbus tam amīcī Alcibiadī sunt factī quam timōre ab eō aliēnātī. Nam cum ācerrimi virī praestantem prūdentiam in omnibus rēbus cōgnōscerent, pertimuērunt nē cāritāte patriae ductus aliquandō ab ipsīs dēsciscēret et cum suīs in grātiam rediret. Itaque tempus ēius interficiendī quaerere 2 īnstituērunt. Id Alcibiadēs diūtius cēlārī nōn

potuit: erat enim eā sagācitāte, ut dēcipī nōn posset, praesertim cum animum attendisset ad cavendum. Itaque ad Tissaphernem, praefectum
3 rēgis Dārēī, sē contulit. Cūius cum in intimam amīcitiam pervēnisset et Athēniēnsium male gestīs in Siciliā rēbus opēs senēscere, cōntrā Lacedaemoniōrum crēscere vidēret, initiō cum Pīsandrō praetōre, quī apud Samum exercitum habēbat, per internūntiōs conloquitur et dē reditū suō facit mentiōnem. Erat enim eōdem quō Alcibiadēs sēnsū, populī
4 potentiae nōn amīcus et optimātium fautor. Ab hōc dēstitūtus prīmum per Thrasybūlum, Lycī fīlium, ab exercitū recipitur praetorque fit apud Samum, post suffrāgante Thērāmene populī scītō restituitur parīque absēns imperiō praeficitur simul cum Thra-
5 sybūlō et Thērāmene. Hōrum in imperiō tanta commūtātiō rērum facta est, ut Lacedaemoniī, quī paulō ante vīctōrēs viguerant, perterritī pācem peterent. Vīctī enim erant quīnque proeliīs terrestribus, tribus nāvālibus, in quibus ducentās nāvēs trirēmēs āmīserant, quae captae in hostium vēnerant potestā-
6 tem. Alcibiadēs simul cum conlēgīs recēperat Iōniam, Hellēspontum, multās praetereā urbēs Graecās, quae in ōrā sitae sunt Thrāciae, quārum expūgnārant complūrēs, in hīs Byzantium, neque minus multās cōnsiliō ad amīcitiam adiūnxerant, quod in locuplētātō exercitū, māximīs rēbus gestīs Athēnās vēnērunt.

6 Hīs cum obviam ūniversa cīvitās in Pīraeum dēscendisset, tanta fuit omnium exspectātiō vīsendī Alcibiadis, ut ad ēius trirēmem volgus cōnflueret 5
2 proinde āc sī sōlus advēnisset. Sic enim populō erat persuāsum et adversās superiōrēs et praesentēs secundās rēs accidisse ēius operā. Itaque et Siciliam · āmīssam et Lacedaemoniōrum vīctōriās culpae suae tribuēbant, quod tālem virum ē cīvitāte expulissent. 10 Neque id sine causā arbitrārī vidēbantur. Nam postquam exercituī praeesse coeperat, neque terrā
3 neque marī hostēs parēs esse potuerant. Hīc ut ē nāvī ēgressus est, quamquam Thērāmenēs at Thrasybūlus iisdem rēbus praefuerant simulque vēnerant 15 in Pīraeum, tamen ūnum omnēs illum prōsequēbantur, et, id quod numquam anteā ūsū vēnerat nisi Olympiae vīctōribus, corōnīs laureis taeniisque volgō dōnābātur. Ille lacrimāns tālem benevolentiam cīvium suōrum accipiēbat, reminīscēns prīstinī tem- 20

pūblicē bona, iīdemque illī Eumolpidae sacerdōtēs rūrsus resacrāre sunt coāctī quī eum dēvŏverant, pīlaeque illae in quibus dēvōtiō fuerat scrīpta, in mare praecipitātae.

7 Haec Alcibiadī laetitia nōn nimis fuit diūturna. Nam cum eī omnēs essent honōrēs dēcrētī tōtaque rēs pūblica domī bellīque trādita, ut ūnīus arbitriō gererētur, et ipse postulāsset ut duo sibi conlēgae darentur, Thrasybūlus et Adīmantus, neque id negātum esset, classe in Asiam profectus, quod apud Cȳmēn minus ex sententiā rem gesserat, in 2 invidiam reccidit. Nihil enim eum nōn efficere posse dūcēbant. Ex quō fīēbat ut omnia minus prōsperē gesta culpae tribuerent, cum aut eum neglegenter aut malitiōsē fēcisse loquerentur ; sīcut tum accidit : nam corruptum ā rēge capere Cȳmēn 3 nōluisse arguēbant. Itaque huic māximē putāmus malō fuisse nimiam opīniōnem ingenī atque virtūtis : timēbātur enim nōn minus quam dīligēbātur, nē secundā fōrtūnā māgnīsque opibus ēlātus tyrannidem concupīsceret. Quibus rēbus factum est ut absentī magistrātum abrogārent et alium in ēius 4 locum substituerent. Id ille ut audīvit, domum revertī nōluit et sē Pactyēn contulit ibique tria castella commūniit, Ornōs, Bizanthēn, Neontīchos, manūque conlēctā prīmus Graecae cīvitātis in Thrā-

8 Neque tamen ā cāritāte patriae potuit recēdere. Nam cum apud Aegos flūmen Philoclēs, praetor Athēniēnsium, classem cōnstituisset suam neque longē abesset Lysander, praetor Lacedaemoniōrum, quī in eō erat occupātus ut bellum quam diūtissimē dūceret, quod ipsīs pecūnia ā rēge suppeditābātur, contrā Athēniēnsibus exhaustīs praeter arma et 2 nāvēs nihil erat super, Alcibiadēs ad exercitum vēnit Athēniēnsium ibique praesente volgō agere coepit: sī vellent, sē coāctūrum Lysandrum dīmicāre aut pācem petere spopondit; Lacedaemoniōs eō nōlle classe cōnflīgere, quod pedestribus cōpiīs 3 plūs quam nāvibus valērent; sibi autem esse facile Seuthem, rēgem Thrācum, addūcere ut eum terrā dēpelleret; quō factō necessāriō aut classe cōn-4 flictūrum aut bellum compositūrum. Id etsī vērē dictum Philoclēs animadvertēbat, tamen postulāta facere nōluit, quod sentiēbat sē Alcibiade receptō nūllius mōmentī apud exercitum futūrum et, sī quid secundī ēvēnisset, nūllam in eā rē suam partem fore, contrā ea, sī quid adversī accidisset, sē ūnum

EPAMINONDAS.

1 Epamīnōndās, Polymnidis fīlius, Thēbānus. Dē hōc priusquam scrībimus, haec praecipienda videntur lēctōribus, nē aliēnōs mōrēs ad suōs referant, nēve ea quae ipsīs leviōra sunt, parī modō apud
2 cēterōs fuisse arbitrentur. Scīmus enim mūsicēn nostrīs mōribus abesse ā prīncipis persōnā, saltāre vērō etiam in vitiīs pōnī : quae omnia apud Graecōs
3 et grāta et laude dīgna dūcuntur. Cum autem exprimere imāginem cōnsuētūdinis atque vītae velīmus Epamīnōndae, nihil vidēmur dēbēre praetermit-
4 tere quod pertineat ad eam dēclārandam. Quārē dīcēmus prīmum dē genere ēius, deinde quibus disciplīnīs et ā quibus sit ērudītus, tum dē mōribus ingenīque facultātibus et sī qua alia memoriā dīgna erunt, postrēmō dē rēbus gestīs, quae ā plūrimīs animī antepōnuntur virtūtibus.

2 Nātus igitur patre quō dīximus, genere honestō, pauper iam ā māiōribus relīctus est, ērudītus autem sīc ut nēmō Thēbānus magis. Nam et citharizāre et cantāre ad chordārum sonum doctus est ā Dio-nȳsiō, quī nōn minōre fuit in mūsicīs glōriā quam Dāmōn aut Lamprus, quōrum pervolgāta sunt nōmina, cantāre tībiīs ab Olympiodōrō, saltāre ā Cal-2 liphrone. At philosophiae praeceptōrem habuit Lȳsim Tarentīnum, Pȳthagorēum : cui quidem sīc fuit dēditus ut adulēscēns trīstem āc sevērum senem omnibus aequālibus suīs in familiāritāte anteposuerit; neque prius eum ā sē dīmīsit quam in doctrīnīs tantō antecessit condiscipulōs ut facile intellegī posset parī modō superātūrum omnēs in cēterīs

3 artibus. Atque haec ad nostram cōnsuētūdinem sunt levia et potius contemnenda ; at in Graeciā,
4 utique ōlim, māgnae laudī erant. Postquam ephēbus est factus et palaestrae dare operam coepit, nōn tam māgnitūdinī vīrium servīvit quam velōcitātī : illam enim ad āthlētārum ūsum, hanc ad bellī exīstimābat ūtilitātem pertinēre. Itaque exercēbātur plūrimum currendō et lūctandō ad eum fīnem, quoad
5 stāns complectī posset atque contendere. In armīs vērō plūrimum studī cōnsūmēbat.

3 Ad hanc corporis fīrmitātem plūra etiam animī bona accesserant. Erat enim modestus, prūdēns, gravis, temporibus sapienter ūtēns, perītus bellī, fortis manū, animō māximō, adeō vēritātis dīligēns
2 ut nē iocō quidem mentīrētur. Idem continēns, clēmēns patiēnsque admīrandum in modum, nōn sōlum populī, sed etiam amīcōrum ferēns iniūriās, in prīmīs commīssa cēlāns, quod interdum nōn minus prōdest quam disertē dīcere, studiōsus audiendī: ex hōc enim facillimē discī arbitrābātur.

3 Itaque cum in circulum vēnisset in quō aut dē rē pūblicā disputārētur aut dē philosophiā sermō habērētur, numquam inde prius discessit quam ad fīnem
4 sermō esset adductus. Paupertātem adeō facile perpessus est ut dē rē pūblicā nihil praeter glōriam cēperit. Amīcōrum in sē tuendō caruit facultātibus, fidē ad aliōs sublevandōs saepe sīc ūsus est ut iūdicārī possit omnia eī cum amīcīs fuisse com-
5 mūnia. Nam cum aut cīvium suōrum aliquis ab hostibus esset captus, aut virgō amīcī nūbilis, quae propter paupertātem conlocārī nōn posset, amīcōrum cōnsilium habēbat et, quantum quisque daret, prō

4 Tentāta autem ēius est abstinentia ā Diomedonte Cyzicēnō: namque is rogātū Artaxerxis rēgis Epamīnōndam pecūniā corrumpendum suscēperat. Hīc māgnō cum pondere aurī Thēbās vēnit et Micythum adulēscentulum quīnque talentīs ad suam perdūxit voluntātem, quem tum Epamīnōndās plūrimum dīli-

5 Fuit etiam disertus, ut nēmō eī Thēbānus pār esset ēloquentiā, neque minus concinnus in brevitāte respondendī quam in perpetuā ōrātiōne ōrnātus. 2 Habuit obtrēctātōrem Meneclīdēn quendam, indidem Thēbīs, et adversārium in administrandā rē pūblicā, satis exercitātum in dīcendō, ut Thēbānum scīlicet: namque illī gentī plūs inest vīrium quam 3 ingenī. Is, quod in rē mīlitārī flōrēre Epamīnōndam vidēbat, hortārī solēbat Thēbānōs ut pācem bellō anteferrent, nē illīus imperātōris opera dēsīderārētur. Huic ille "Fallis," inquit, "verbō cīvēs tuōs, quod hōs ā bellō āvocās: ōtī enim nōmine 4 servitūtem conciliās. Nam paritur pāx bellō. Itaque quī eā diūtinā volunt fruī, bellō exercitātī esse dēbent. Quārē sī prīncipēs Graeciae voltis esse, 5 castrīs est vōbīs ūtendum, nōn palaestrā." Īdem ille Meneclīdēs cum huic obiceret, quod līberōs nōn habēret neque uxōrem dūxisset, māximēque īnsolentiam, quod sibi Agamemnonis bellī glōriam vidērētur cōnsecūtus: at ille "Dēsine," inquit, "Meneclīda, dē uxōre mihi exprobrāre: nam nūllīus in istā rē minus ūtī cōnsiliō volō." 6 Īdem cum in conventum vēnisset Arcadum, petēns ut societātem cum Thēbānīs et Argīvīs facerent, contrāque Callistratus, Athēniēnsium lēgātus, quī ēloquentiā omnēs eō praestābat tempore, postulāret ut potius amīcitiam sequerentur Atticōrum, et in 2 ōrātiōne suā multa invectus esset in Thēbānōs et Argīvōs, in iīsque hōc posuisset, animum advertere dēbēre Arcades quālēs utraque cīvitās cīvēs prōcreāsset, ex quibus dē cēterīs possent iūdicāre: Argīvōs enim fuisse Orestem et Alcmaeonem mātricidās, Thēbīs Oedipum nātum, quī cum patrem suum interfēcisset, ex mātre līberōs prōcreāsse: 3 huic in respondendō Epamīnōndās, cum dē cēterīs perōrāsset, postquam ad illa duo opprobria pervēnit, admīrārī sē dīxit stultitiam rhētoris Atticī, quī nōn animadverterit innocentēs illōs nātōs domī, scelere admissō cum patriā essent expulsī, receptōs esse 4 ab Athēniēnsibus. Sed māximē ēius ēloquentia ēlūxit Spartae lēgāti ante pūgnam Leuctricam. Quō cum omnium sociōrum convēnissent lēgātī, cōram frequentissimō lēgātiōnum conventū sīc Lacedaemoniōrum tyrannidem coarguit ut nōn minus illā ōrātiōne opēs eōrum concusserit quam Leuctricā pūgnā. Tum enim perfēcit, quod post appāruit, ut auxiliō Lacedaemoniī sociōrum prīvārentur.

7 Fuisse patientem suōrumque iniūriās ferentem cīvium, quod sē patriae īrāscī nefās esse dūceret, haec sunt testimōnia. Cum eum propter invidiam cīvēs suī praeficere exercituī nōluissent duxque esset dēlēctus bellī imperītus, cūius errōre eō esset dēducta illa multitūdō mīlitum ut omnēs dē salūte pertimēscerent, quod locōrum angustiīs clausī ab hostibus obsidēbantur, dēsīderārī coepta est Epamīnōndae dīligentia: erat enim ibi prīvātus numerō 2 mīlitis. Ā quō cum peterent opem, nūllam adhibuit memoriam contumēliae et exercitum obsidiōne līberātum domum redūxit incolumem. Nec vērō hōc 3 semel fēcit, sed saepius. Māximē autem fuit inlūstre, cum in Peloponnēsum exercitum dūxisset adversus Lacedaemoniōs habēretque conlēgās duōs, quōrum alter erat Pelopidās, vir fortis āc strēnuus. Hī cum crīminibus adversāriōrum omnēs in invidiam vēnissent ob eamque rem imperium iīs esset abrogātum atque in eōrum locum aliī praetōrēs successissent. 4 Epamīnōndās populī scītō nōn pāruit idemque ut facerent persuāsit conlēgīs et bellum quod suscēperat, gessit. Namque animadvertēbat, nisi id fēcisset, tōtum exercitum propter praetōrum im- 5 prūdentiam īnscītiamque bellī peritūrum. Lēx erat Thēbīs quae morte multābat, sī quis imperium diūtius retinuisset quam lēge praefīnītum foret. Hanc Epamīnōndās cum reī pūblicae cōnservandae causā lātam vidēret, ad perniciem cīvitātis cōnferre nōluit et quattuor mēnsibus diūtius quam populus iūsserat, gessit imperium.

8 Postquam domum reditum est, conlēgae ēius hōc crīmine accūsābantur. Quibus ille permīsit ut omnem causam in sē trānsferrent suāque operā factum contenderent ut lēgī nōn oboedīrent. Quā dēfēnsiōne illīs perīculō līberātīs nēmō Epamīnōndam respōnsūrum putābat, quod, quid dīceret, nōn habēret. At ille in iūdicium vēnit, nihil eōrum negāvit quae adversārīī crīminī dabant, omniaque quae conlēgae dixerant, cōnfessus est neque recūsāvit quō minus lēgis poenam subīret, sed ūnum ab īīs petīvit, ut in sepulcrō suō īnscrīberent: "Epamīnōndās ā Thēbānīs morte multātus est, quod eōs coēgit apud Leuctra superāre Lacedaemoniōs, quōs ante sē imperātōrem nēmō Boeōtiōrum ausus sit aspicere in aciē, quodque ūnō proeliō nōn sōlum Thēbās ab interitū retrāxit, sed etiam ūniversam Graeciam in lībertātem vindicāvit eōque rēs utrōrumque perdūxit ut Thēbānī Spartam oppūgnārent, Lacedaemoniī satis habērent sī salvī esse possent, neque prius bellāre dēstitit quam

9 Hīc extrēmō tempore imperātor apud Mantinēam cum aciē īnstrūctā audācius īnstāret hostibus, cōgnitus ā Lacedaemoniīs, quod in ūnīus perniciē ēius patriae sitam putābant salūtem, ūniversī in ūnum impetum fēcērunt neque prius abscessērunt quam māgnā caede multīsque occīsīs fortissimē ipsum Epamīnōndam pūgnantem, sparō ēminus percussum, concidere vīdērunt. Hūius cāsū aliquantum retardātī sunt Boeōtiī, neque tamen prius pūgnā excessērunt quam repūgnantēs prōflīgārunt. At Epamīnōndās, cum animadverteret mortiferum sē volnus accēpisse simulque, sī ferrum, quod ex hastīlī in corpore remānserat, extrāxisset, animam statim ēmīssūrum, usque eō retinuit quoad renūntiātum est vīcisse Boeōtiōs. Id postquam audīvit, "Satis," inquit, "vīxī: invictus enim morior." Tum ferrō extrāctō cōnfestim exanimātus est.

Quō tempore duce Pelopidā exsulēs Thēbās occupārunt et praesidium Lacedaemoniōrum ex arce expulērunt, Epamīnōndās, quamdiū facta est caedēs cīvium, domō sē tenuit, quod neque malōs dēfendere volēbat neque impūgnāre, nē manūs suōrum sanguine cruentāret: namque omnem cīvīlem victōriam fūnestam putābat. Īdem, postquam apud Cadmēam cum Lacedaemoniīs pūgnārī coeptum est, in prīmīs stetit.

PELOPIDAS.

1 Pelopidās Thēbānus, magis historicīs quam volgō nōtus. Cūius dē virtūtibus dubitō quem ad modum expōnam, quod vereor, sī rēs explicāre incipiam, nē nōn vītam ēius ēnārrāre, sed historiam videar scrībere; sī tantummodo summās attigerō, nē rudibus Graecārum litterārum minus dīlūcidē appāreat quantus fuerit ille vir. Itaque utrīque reī occurram, quantum potuerō, et medēbor cum satietātī tum īgnōrantiae lēctōrum.

2 Phoebidās Lacedaemonius, cum exercitum Olynthum dūceret iterque per Thēbās faceret, arcem oppidī, quae Cadmēa nōminātur, occupāvit impulsū paucōrum Thēbānōrum, quī adversāriae factiōnī quō facilius resisterent, Lacōnum rēbus studēbant, idque 3 suō prīvātō nōn pūblicō fēcit cōnsiliō. Quō factō eum Lacedaemoniī ab exercitū remōvērunt pecūniāque multārunt; neque eō magis arcem Thēbānīs reddidērunt, quod susceptīs inimīcitiīs satius dūcēbant eōs obsidērī quam līberārī. Nam post

Peloponnēsium bellum Athēnāsque dēvīctās cum Thēbānīs sibi rem esse exīstimābant et eōs esse
4 sōlōs quī adversus resistere audērent. Hāc mente amīcīs suīs summās potestātēs dederant alterīusque factiōnis prīncipēs partim interfēcerant, aliōs in ex- 5 silium ēiēcerant: in quibus Pelopidās hīc, dē quō scrībere exōrsī sumus, pulsus patriā carēbat.

2 Hī omnēs ferē Athēnās sē contulerant, nōn quō sequerentur ōtium, sed ut, quem ex proximō locum fors obtulisset, eō patriam recuperāre nīterentur. 10
2 Itaque cum tempus esset vīsum reī gerendae, commūniter cum iīs quī Thēbīs idem sentiēbant, diem dēlēgērunt ad inimīcōs opprimendōs cīvitātemque līberandam eum quō māximī magistrātūs simul cōn-
3 suērant epulārī. Māgnae saepe rēs nōn ita māgnīs 15 cōpiīs sunt gestae, sed profectō numquam tam ab tenuī initiō tantae opēs sunt prōflīgātae. Nam duodecim adulēscentulī coiērunt ex iīs quī exsiliō erant multātī, cum omninō nōn essent amplius centum, quī tantō sē offerrent perīculō. Quā pau- 20

dux erat Pelopidās, cum Athēnīs interdiū exīssent, ut vesperāscente caelō Thēbās possent pervenīre, cum canibus vēnāticīs exiērunt, rētia ferentēs, vestītū agrestī, quō minōre suspiciōne facerent iter. Quī cum tempore ipsō quō studuerant, pervēnissent, domum Charōnis dēvertērunt, ā quō et tempus et diēs erat datus.

3 Hōc locō libet interpōnere, etsī sēiūnctum ab rē prōpositā est, nimia fīdūcia quantae calamitātī soleat esse. Nam magistrātuum Thēbānōrum statim ad aurēs pervēnit exsulēs in urbem vēnisse. Id illī vīnō epulīsque dēditī usque eō dēspexērunt ut nē 2 quaerere quidem dē tantā rē labōrārint. Accessit etiam quod magis aperīret eōrum dēmentiam. Adlāta est enim epistula Athēnīs ab Archīnō ūnī ex hīs, Archiae, quī tum māximum magistrātum Thēbīs obtinēbat, in quā omnia dē profectiōne eōrum perscrīpta erant. Quae cum iam accubantī in convīviō esset data, sīcut erat sīgnāta, sub pulvīnum subiciēns "In crāstinum," inquit, "differō rēs seriās." 3 At illī omnēs, cum iam nox prōcessisset, vīnolentī ab exsulibus duce Pelopidā sunt interfectī. Quibus rēbus cōnfectīs, volgō ad arma lībērtātemque vocātō, nōn sōlum quī in urbe erant, sed etiam undique ex agrīs concurrērunt, praesidium Lacedaemoniōrum ex arce pepulērunt, patriam obsidiōne līberārunt, auctōrēs Cadmēae occupandae partim occidērunt, partim in exsilium ēiēcērunt.

4 Hōc tam turbidō tempore, sīcut suprā docuimus, Epamīnōndās, quoad cum cīvibus dīmicātum est, domī quiētus fuit. Itaque haec līberātārum Thēbārum propria laus est Pelopidae, cēterae ferē
2 commūnēs cum Epamīnōndā. Namque in Leuctricā pūgnā imperātōre Epamīnōndā hīc fuit dux dēlēctae manūs, quae prīma phalangem prōstrāvit Lacō-
3 num. Omnibus praetereā perīculīs adfuit (sīcut, Spartam cum oppūgnāvit, alterum tenuit cornū), quōque Messēna celerius restituerētur, lēgātus in Persās est profectus. Dēnique haec fuit altera persōna Thēbīs, sed tamen secunda ita ut proxima esset Epamīnōndae.

5 Cōnflictātus autem est cum adversā fōrtūnā. Nam et initiō, sīcut ostendimus, exsul patriā caruit, et cum Thessaliam in potestātem Thēbānōrum cuperet redigere lēgātiōnisque iūre satis tēctum sē arbitrārētur, quod apud omnēs gentēs sānctum esse
2 cōnsuēsset, ā tyrannō Alexandrō Pheraeō simul cum Ismēniā comprehēnsus in vincla coniectus est. Hunc Epamīnōndās recuperāvit, bellō persequēns Alexandrum. Post id factum numquam animō plācārī potuit in eum, a quō erat violātus. Itaque persuāsit Thēbānīs ut subsidiō Thessaliae proficī-

In quō proeliō Alexandrum ut animadvertit, incēnsus īrā equum in eum concitāvit proculque dīgressus ā suīs coniectū tēlōrum cōnfossus concidit. Atque hōc secundā victōriā accidit: nam iam inclīnātae erant tyrannōrum cōpiae. Quō factō omnēs Thessaliae cīvitātēs interfectum Pelopidam corōnīs aureīs et statuīs aēneīs līberōsque ēius multō agrō dōnārunt.

AGESILAUS.

1 Agēsilāus Lacedaemonius cum ā cēterīs scrīptōribus, tum eximiē ā Xenophōnte Sōcraticō conlau-
2 dātus est: eō enim ūsus est familiārissimē. Hic prīmum dē rēgnō cum Leotychidē, frātris fīliō, habuit contentiōnem. Mōs erat enim ā māiōribus Lacedaemoniīs trāditus ut duōs habērent semper rēgēs, nōmine magis quam imperiō, ex duābus familiīs Proclī et Eurysthenis, quī prīncipēs ex prō-
3 geniē Herculis Spartae rēgēs fuērunt. Hōrum ex alterā in alterius familiae locum fierī nōn licēbat: ita utraque suum retinēbat ōrdinem. Prīmum ratiō habēbātur quī māximus nātū esset ex līberīs ēius quī rēgnāns dēcessisset; sin is virīlem sexum nōn reliquisset, tum dēligēbātur quī proximus esset pro-
4 pinquitāte. Mortuus erat Agis rēx, frāter Agēsilāī: fīlium relīquerat Leotychidem. Quem ille nātum nōn āgnōrat, eundem moriēns suum esse dixerat. Is dē honōre rēgnī cum Agēsilāō, patruō suō, con-
5 tendit, neque id quod petīvit, cōnsecūtus est. Nam

Lȳsandrō suffrāgante, homine, ut ostendimus suprā, factiōsō et iīs temporibus potente, Agēsilāus antelātus est.

2 Hīc simul atque imperī potītus est, persuāsit Lacedaemoniīs ut exercitūs ēmitterent in Asiam bellumque rēgī facerent, docēns satius esse in Asiā quam in Eurōpā dīmicārī. Namque fāma exierat Artaxerxēn comparāre classēs pedestrēsque exercitūs, quōs in 2 Graeciam mitteret. Datā potestāte tantā celeritāte ūsus est ut prius in Asiam cum cōpiīs pervēnerit quam rēgiī satrapae eum scīrent profectum. Quō factum est ut omnēs imparātōs imprūdentēsque 3 offenderet. Id ut cōgnōvit Tissaphernēs, quī summum imperium tum inter praefectōs habēbat rēgiōs, indūtiās ā Lacōne petīvit, simulāns sē dare operam, ut Lacedaemoniīs cum rēge convenīret, rē autem vērā ad cōpiās comparandās, eāsque impetrāvit 4 trimestrēs. Iūrāvit autem uterque sē sine dolō indūtiās cōnservātūrum. In quā pactiōne summā fidē mānsit Agēsilāus; contrā ea Tissaphernēs nihil 5 aliud quam bellum comparāvit. Id etsī sentiēbat Lacō, tamen iūsiūrandum servābat multumque in eō sē cōnsequī dicēbat, quod Tissaphernēs periūriō suō et hominēs suīs rēbus abaliēnāret et deōs sibi īrātōs redderet, sē autem cōnservātā religiōne cōnfīrmāre exercitum, cum animadverteret deum nūmen facere sēcum, hominēsque sibi conciliārī amīciōrēs, quod iis studēre cōnsuēssent quōs cōnservāre fidem vidērent.

3 Postquam indūtiārum praeteriit diēs, barbarus nōn dubitāns, quod ipsius erant plūrima domicilia in Cāriā et ea regiō iīs temporibus multō putābātur locuplētissima, eō potissimum hostēs impetum fac-
2 tūrōs, omnēs suās cōpiās eō contrāxerat. At Agēsilāus in Phrygiam sē convertit eamque prius dēpopulātus est quam Tissaphernēs usquam sē movēret. Māgnā praedā mīlitibus locuplētātīs Ephesum hiemātum exercitum redūxit atque ibi officīnīs armōrum īnstitūtīs māgnā industriā bellum apparāvit. Et quō studiōsius armārentur īnsīgnisque ōrnārentur, praemia prōposuit, quibus dōnārentur quōrum ēgregia in eā rē fuisset industria.
3 Fēcit idem in exercitātiōnum generibus, ut, quī cēterīs praestitissent, eōs māgnīs adficeret mūneribus. Hīs igitur rēbus effēcit ut et ōrnātissimum
4 et exercitātissimum habēret exercitum. Huic cum tempus esset vīsum cōpiās extrahere ex hībernāculīs, vīdit, sī, quō esset iter factūrus, palam prōnūntiāsset, hostēs nōn crēditūrōs aliāsque regiōnēs praesidiīs occupātūrōs neque dubitātūrōs aliud eum
5 factūrum āc prōnūntiāsset. Itaque cum ille Sardīs itūrum sē dīxisset, Tissaphernēs eandem Cāriam dēfendendam putāvit. In quō cum eum opīniō fefellisset victumque sē vīdisset cōnsiliō, sērō suīs praesidiō profectus est. Nam cum illō vēnisset, iam Agēsilāus multīs locīs expūgnātīs māgnā erat 6 praedā potītus. Lacō autem cum vidēret hostēs equitātū superāre, numquam in campō suī fēcit potestātem et iīs locīs manum cōnseruit quibus plūs pedestrēs cōpiae valērent. Pepulit ergō, quotiēnscumque congressus est, multō māiōrēs adversāriōrum cōpiās et sīc in Asiā versātus est ut omnium opīniōne victor dūcerētur.

4 Hīc cum iam animō meditārētur proficīscī in Persās et ipsum rēgem adorīrī, nūntius eī domō vēnit ephorōrum mīssū bellum Athēniēnsēs et Boeōtiōs indīxisse Lacedaemoniīs; quārē venīre
2 nē dubitāret. In hōc nōn minus ēius pietās suspicienda est quam virtūs bellica: quī cum victōrī praeesset exercituī māximamque habēret fīdūciam rēgnī Persārum potiundī, tantā modestiā dictō audiēns fuit iūssīs absentium magistrātuum ut sī prīvātus in comitiō esset Spartae. Cūius exemplum
3 utinam imperātōrēs nostrī sequī voluissent! Sed illūc redeāmus. Agēsilāus opulentissimō rēgnō praeposuit bonam exīstimātiōnem multōque glōriōsius dūxit, sī īnstitūtīs patriae pāruisset, quam sī

4 bellō superāsset Asiam. Hac igitur mente Hellēspontum cōpiās trāiēcit tantāque ūsus est celeritāte ut, quod iter Xerxēs annō vertente cōnfēcerat, hīc 5 trānsierit trīgintā diēbus. Cum iam haud ita longē abesset ā Peloponnēsō, obsistere eī cōnātī sunt
Athēniēnsēs et Boeōtiī cēterīque eōrum sociī apud
6 Corōnēam: quōs omnēs gravī proeliō vīcit. Hūius vīctōriae vel māxima fuit laus quod, cum plērīque ex fugā sē in templum Minervae coniēcissent quaererēturque ab eō quid iīs vellet fierī, etsī aliquot vōlnera accēperat eō proeliō et īrātus vidēbātur omnibus quī adversus arma tulerant, tamen ante-7 tulit īrae religiōnem et eōs vetuit violārī. Neque vērō hōc sōlum in Graeciā fēcit, ut templa deōrum sāncta habēret, sed etiam apud barbarōs summā religiōne omnia simulācra ārāsque cōnservāvit.
8 Itaque praedicābat mīrārī sē nōn sacrilegōrum numerō habērī quī supplicibus deōrum nocuissent, aut nōn graviōribus poenīs adfici quī religiōnem minuerent quam quī fāna spoliārent.

5 Post hōc proelium conlātum omne bellum est circā Corinthum ideōque Corinthium est appellātum.
2 Hīc cum ūnā pūgnā decem mīlia hostium Agēsilāō duce cecidissent eōque factō opēs adversāriōrum dēbilitātae vidērentur, tantum āfuit ab insolentiā glōriae ut commiserātus sit fortūnam Graeciae, quod tam multī ā sē vīctī vitiō adversāriōrum concidissent: namque illā multitūdine, sī sāna mēns esset, Graeciae supplicium Persās dare potuisse.

3 Idem, cum adversāriōs intrā moenia compulisset et ut Corinthum oppūgnāret multī hortārentur, negāvit id suae virtūtī convenīre: sē enim eum esse dīxit quī ad officium peccantēs redīre cōgeret, nōn quī
4 urbēs nōbilissimās expūgnāret Graeciae. "Nam sī," inquit, "eōs exstinguere voluerimus quī nōbīscum adversus barbarōs stetērunt, nōsmet ipsī nōs expūgnāverimus illīs quiēscentibus. Quō factō sine negōtiō, cum voluerint, nōs oppriment."

6 Interim accidit illa calamitās apud Leuctra Lacedaemoniīs. Quō nē proficīscerētur, cum ā plērīsque ad exeundum premerētur, ut sī dē exitū dīvīnāret, exīre nōluit. Īdem, cum Epamīnōndās Spartam oppūgnāret essetque sine mūrīs oppidum, tālem sē imperātōrem praebuit ut eō tempore omnibus appāruerit, nisi ille fuisset, Spartam futūram nōn fuisse.
2 In quō quidem discrīmine celeritās ēius cōnsilī salūtī fuit ūniversīs. Nam cum quīdam adulēscentulī, hostium adventū perterritī, ad Thēbānōs trānsfugere vellent et locum extrā urbem ēditum cēpissent, Agēsilāus, quī perniciōsissimum fore vidēret, sī animadversum esset quemquam ad hostēs trānsfugere cōnārī, cum suīs eō vēnit atque, ut sī bonō animō fēcissent, laudāvit cōnsilium eōrum, quod eum locum occupāssent, et sē quoque id fierī dēbēre

3 animadvertisse. Sīc adulēscentēs simulātā laudātiōne recuperāvit et adiūnctis dē suīs comitibus locum tūtum relīquit. Namque illī auctī numerō eōrum quī expertēs erant cōnsilī, commovēre sē nōn sunt ausī eōque libentius, quod latēre arbitrābantur quae cōgitāverant.

7 Sine dubiō post Leuctricam pūgnam Lacedaemonii sē numquam refēcērunt neque prīstinum imperium recuperārunt, cum interim numquam Agēsilāus dēstitit quibuscumque rēbus posset patriam iuvāre.
2 Nam cum praecipuē Lacedaemonii indigērent pecūniā, ille omnibus quī ā rēge dēfēcerant, praesidiō fuit; ā quibus māgnā dōnātus pecūniā patriam sub-
3 levāvit. Atque in hōc illud in prīmīs fuit admīrābile, cum māxima mūnera eī ab rēgibus āc dynastis cīvitātibusque cōnferrentur, quod nihil umquam domum suam contulit, nihil dē victū, nihil dē vestītū
4 Lacōnum mūtāvit. Domō eādem fuit contentus quā Eurysthenēs, prōgenitor māiōrum suōrum, fuerat ūsus; quam quī intrārat, nūllum sīgnum libīdinis, nūllum lūxuriae vidēre poterat, contrā ea plūrima patientiae atque abstinentiae. Sīc enim erat īnstrūcta ut in nūllā rē differret cūiusvīs inopis atque prīvātī.

8 Atque hīc tantus vir ut nātūram fautrīcem habue-rat in tribuendīs animī virtūtibus, sīc maleficam nactus est in corpore fingendō: nam et statūrā fuit humilī et corpore exiguō et claudus alterō pede. Quae rēs etiam nōnnūllam adferēbat dēfōrmitātem, atque īgnōtī, faciem ēius cum intuērentur, contemnēbant, quī autem virtūtēs nōverant, nōn poterant

Quod eī ūsū vēnit, cum annōrum octōgintā subsidiō Tachō in Aegyptum iisset et in actā cum suīs accubuisset sine ūllō tēctō strātumque habēret tāle ut terra tēcta esset strāmentīs neque hūc amplius quam pellis esset iniecta, eōdemque comitēs omnēs accubuissent vestītū humilī atque obsolētō, ut eōrum ōrnātus nōn modo in hīs rēgem nēminem sīgnificāret, sed hominēs nōn beātissimōs
3 esse suspīciōnem praebēret. Hūius dē adventū fāma cum ad rēgiōs esset perlāta, celeriter mūnera eō cūiusque generis sunt adlāta. Hīs quaerentibus Agēsilāum vix fidēs facta est ūnum esse ex iīs quī
4 tum accubābant. Quī cum rēgis verbīs quae attulerant dedissent, ille praeter vitulīnam et ēiusmodī genera obsōnī, quae praesēns tempus dēsīderābat, nihil accēpit; unguenta, corōnās secundamque mēn-
5 sam servīs dispertiit, cētera referrī iūssit. Quō factō eum barbarī magis etiam contempsērunt, quod eum īgnōrantiā bonārum rērum illa potissimum sūmpsisse arbitrābantur.

HANNIBAL.

1 Hannibal, Hamilcaris fīlius, Karthāginiēnsis. Sī vērum est, quod nēmō dubitat, ut populus Rōmānus omnēs gentēs virtūte superārit, nōn est īnfitiandum Hannibalem tantō praestitisse cēterōs imperātōrēs prūdentiā, quantō populus Rōmānus 2 antecēdat fortitūdine cūnctās nātiōnēs. Nam quotiēnscumque cum eō congressus est in Ītaliā, semper discessit superior. Quod nisi domī cīvium suōrum invidiā dēbilitātus esset, Rōmānōs vidētur superāre potuisse. Sed multōrum obtrēctātiō dēvīcit ūnīus virtūtem.

3 Hīc autem velut hērēditāte relictum odium paternum ergā Rōmānōs sic cōnservāvit ut prius animam quam id dēposuerit, quī quidem, cum patriā pulsus esset et aliēnārum opum indigēret, numquam dēsti- 2 terit animō bellāre cum Rōmānīs. Nam ut omittam Philippum, quem absēns hostem reddidit Rōmānīs, omnium iīs temporibus potentissimus rēx Antiochus fuit. Hunc tantā cupiditāte incendit bellandī ut

NOTES.

MILTIADES.

SYNOPSIS. — Miltiades is sent to the Thracian Chersonesus to found a colony. On the way he touches at Lemnos, and is made sport of by the Lemnians (1). He takes possession of the Chersonesus, and brings Lemnos under the power of Athens (2). Left with others by Darius the Persian in charge of the bridge over the Ister, while the king invades Scythia, he forms a plan for freeing the Greeks from Persian sway, but is thwarted by Histiaeus (3). Darius makes war upon the Greeks. Miltiades induces the Athenians to take the field against the Persians (4). He defeats these in battle at Marathon, before the arrival of the Lacedaemonians (5). His reward for the victory (6). He sails with a fleet to subdue the Cyclades, but returns with nothing accomplished. Therefore he is condemned for treason, and dies in prison (7). The true reason for his conviction and sentence (8).

CHRONOLOGY. — 560[1] (about): Miltiades, the son of Cypselus, is established as tyrant of the Chersonesus. 521–485: Darius I., king of the Persians. 518 (about): Miltiades, the son of Cimon, and nephew of the founder Miltiades, the son of Cypselus, goes to the Chersonesus. 513: Darius wages his Scythian war. 500 (about): Miltiades brings Lemnos under Athenian sway. 500–494: Ionic revolt. 493: Miltiades returns to Athens. 490: Battle of Marathon. 488: Death of Miltiades.

[1] All dates are to be taken as before Christ.

Page 1. 1. Miltiadēs, Cimōnis fīlius, Athēniēnsis: these words serve as a title, but are constructed with the first sentence. In many of the "Lives" Nepos disconnects the first few words from what follows and gives us a title in quite modern fashion. Cf., e.g., the beginning of Themistocles, Alcibiades, Epaminondas.

1. Cimōnis fīlius: a mistake on Nepos' part, who confounds the two men, uncle and nephew, bearing the same name. The founder of the colony went to the Chersonesus some forty years before the hero of Marathon, who was the son of Cimon. The younger Miltiades succeeded his brother Stesagoras, who had succeeded the elder Miltiades, their uncle. The following is the genealogy:

1. cum: in translating begin with this word; it is displaced to allow Miltiadēs, etc., to have the first, emphatic position.

1. et . . . et . . . et: not only . . . and . . . but also.

2. antīquitāte: abl. of cause, depending on flōrēret.

2. antīquitāte generis: the Greeks were fond of tracing back their genealogy through a line of distinguished ancestors to some god or hero; so Miltiades connected his family line with Aeacus, the son of Zeus.

2. suā modestiā: his own unassuming manner. See group MED-.

3. ūnus: is used to strengthen the superlative māximē.

3. ūnus omnium māximē flōrēret: was eminent far above all others.

3. eā aetāte: abl. of quality (G. 251 and note; H. 419, II.).

5. cīvēs . . . suī: his fellow-citizens, suī irregularly for ēius.

6. quālem cōgnitum iūdicārunt: as they judged him to be when they came to know him; literally, as they judged him known. This phrase, taken in connection with eā aetāte above, would seem to mean that Miltiades, having acquitted himself worthily in the highest office in Athens, viz., that of archon, had won the full confidence of his fellow-citizens, who were quite ready to place him in the lead of any unusual enterprise.

7. Chersonēsum: we should expect in or ad with this, but Nepos everywhere gives it the construction of names of towns. This, unmodified, always refers to the Thracian peninsula, which, stretching along the Hellespont, was a most important point for the Athenians to hold, since they had for many years before this carried on extensive commerce with the coasts of the Black Sea.

7. colōnōs: the appropriateness of this term for settlers becomes evident when its etymology is known. Read carefully group COL-.

7. cūius generis: the relative at the beginning of a principal sentence should be translated by the demonstrative, usually with a conjunction.

7. generis: i.e., this kind of people, would-be settlers. See group GEN-, GNA-.

8. cum: in translating begin with cum, since; cf. note on cum in l. 1 above.

9. societātem: note carefully the etymology, and see group SEC-.

9. dēlēctī: a substantive. See group LEG-.

10. dēlīberātum: the former supine expressing purpose (G. 302; H. 546).

10. quī cōnsulerent Apollinem: not needed here. It probably is a gloss, i.e., an attempt to explain the unusual meaning of dēlīberātum, and has crept into the text.

11. quō: why abl.? duce is a predicate appositive with it; potissimum: adverb; trans., quō . . . ūterentur: whom in preference to others they should make their leader.

12. Thrāces: the usual account makes the elder Miltiades serve as the leader of a Thracian tribe, the Dolonci, who, hard pressed in war, inquired of the Delphic oracle for a leader. Hdt. (VI. 36, 37) gives the story. For details consult Classical Dictionary, under Miltiades.

12. cum quibus: usually cum is appended to the relative, quibuscum.

13. nōminātim: (examine group GNO-) how ambiguous the usual answers of oracles were may be seen from Them. 2, 6. According to Hdt., the Pythia did not name Miltiades to the Dolonci, but told them to ask their first entertainer to lead them.

14. Pythia: in the most ancient times Delphi, a chief seat of the worship of Apollo, was called Pytho, Apollo the Pythius, and his priestess, the Pythia. She uttered the oracles while seated upon a tripod or three-legged stool; but as the sounds she made were unintelligible to questioners, they were taken down by priests of the temple, and in the form of hexameter verse communicated to inquirers.

14. ut . . . sūmerent: translate by an Eng. infinitive.

15. id sī fēcissent, etc.: Nepos suddenly drops into indirect discourse, leaving us to supply dīxit from praecēpit. Consequently fēcissent is not in a condition contrary to fact ("if they had done this"), which would make nonsense, but stands for a fut. perf. indic. The form of the oracle was, "If they shall have done this." With futūra supply esse; it is the principal verb in the indirect discourse.

16. Hōc . . . respōnsō: in consequence of this reply, abl. of cause.

16. cum dēlēctā: cum is of course a preposition here. Begin the translation of the whole sentence with the cum, when (cf. cum, p. 1, ll. 1 and 8), just before accessisset.

16. manū: note the two meanings the word has.

17. classe . . . profectus: translate by one word sail. The abl., though unmodified, tells how the action of the verb was carried on, hence expresses manner.

18. incolās: connect etymologically with a word used above.

19. facerent: = ut facerent, depends on postulāsset, connected by que to vellet; repeat cum in thought. Ut is frequently omitted after certain classes of verbs (G. 331, f. R.; H. 499, 2).

20. id: i.e., voluntarily submit to Athenian power.

21. nāvibus proficīscēns: see on classe profectus, just above.

21. ventō aquilōne: the abl. absolute; with Aquilo blowing.

Page 2. 1. vēnisset: cf. fēcissent, l. 15, note. What would be the form of direct discourse?

2. septentriōnibus: the seven stars termed popularly the "Dipper," used as symbolical of the north; variously known as the "Great Bear," "Charles's Wain," etc. Lemnos was one day's sail southward from the lowest point of the Chersonēsus.

2. adversum: with tenet, this governs the dative eīs implied in proficiscentibus.

2. Athēnīs: abl. construed just as domō preceding.

6. brevī tempore: join in trans. with potītus; regiōne is the abl. with potior. Cf. quō with ūterentur, p. 1, l. 11.

6. barbarōrum: the Greeks characterized all foreigners by this term, only excepting later the Romans.

7. petierat = petīverat.

7. castellīs: castellum is a diminutive from castrum. Probably the word is dat. here and to be joined with idōnea.

8. multitūdinem: body of men.

9. conlocāvit: settled, i.e., apportioned them fields. Do not confound with conligō, collect.

9. excursiōnibus: raids.

10. neque minus: do not begin with "neither." Trans. affirmatively: and . . . quite as much . . . as. Cf. in l. 15, below, neque magis.

10. prūdentiā: study group VID-.

11. cum: with dēvīcisset.

12. dēvīcisset: the dē in composition implies the completeness of the victory; see group VIC-.

12. dēcrēvit: from dēcernō.

13. erat . . . dignitāte rēgiā: the abl. of quality with esse is often best trans. freely by hold, possess, enjoy. So here had the rank of king.

14. quamvīs: we should expect quamquam, as the indicative follows. Perhaps this is a mistake, though it occurs once elsewhere in Nepos.

15. nōmine: an abl. of separation with careō, be without.

15. neque id magis . . . quam: trans. affirmatively, less by . . . than. Cf. neque minus . . . quam above in l. 10.

16. neque: often best trans. but . . . not.

16. eō: on that account.

17. quibus rēbus: see on cūius generis, p. 1, l. 7.

19. obtinēret: maintain or retain in English; avoid translating obtain.

20. Chersonēsō . . . cōnstitūtā: when affairs in the Chersonesus had been settled in this way.

21. revertitur: Nepos continues his narrative in the so-called historical present, making the events go on as it were before our eyes (G. 276, d; H. 467, III.).

21. ex pactō: ex in this and similar expressions means in accordance with.

22. sibi: refers to subject of postulat.

22. illī enim dīxerant: we look here for illōs dīxīsse, parallel to sē habēre below, both dependent on the word of saying implied in postulat (see note on id sī fēcissent, p. 1, l. 15, above). We may consider the statement a parenthetical one, thrown in by Nepos to explain to the reader the pactō referred to.

22. cum: with the verb.

22. ventō boreā: substituted for ventō aquilōne, used in p. 1, l. 21. Both are names for north or northeast wind.

24. Chersonēsī: locative case. Treated by Nepos as the name of a town, or small island. Cf. p. 1, l. 7, Chersonēsum.

26. dictō: abl. of cause . . . parallel to fōrtūnā. Adversāriōrum also goes with dictō.

Page 3. 1. ausī nōn sunt: curious order; the perfect indicative of audeō.

2. dēmigrārunt = dēmigrāvērunt.

2. cēterās: is this accurate? Are there islands in the Aegean other than Lemnos and the Cyclades?

5. eīsdem temporibus: 513 B.C.

6. exercitū trāiectō: in translating make this abl. abs. parallel to bellum īnferre, connected with it by a conjunction, as if it read: exercitum trāicere et.

7. in Histrō: over we should say. The Hister was the lower Danube.

7. quā: an adverb = ut eā (viā); the clause shows his purpose in building the bridge. There is another reading quō. What would that refer to?

8. abesset: subjunct. not from the influence of dum; Nepos shows this to be the thought of Darius in conferring the charge of the bridge upon them (G. 341; H. 528, 1). Mere statement of the fact in narrative by Nepos would require the indicative. Trans. as long as he should be away.

10. quibus singulīs: to each of whom, literally to whom one by one: singulīs, because each in his own city or district had supreme sway.

11. imperia: singular in English. The Latin uses the plural, because each had received an imperium.

11. Sīc: i.e., by giving them this power.

11. sē: refers to Darius and is subject accus. of retentūrum (esse), and loquentēs = eōs loquentēs is its object.

12. Graeca . . . incolerent: i.e., the Greek colonies in Asia.

14. tuenda: see group TV-: equivalent to ad tuendum.

14. trādidisset: is this a condition contrary to fact? See on id sī fēcissent, p. 1, l. 15.

14. sē oppressō: if he (Darius) should be put down.

15. in hōc . . . numerō: for in hōrum . . . numerō. It is usual in Latin to make relative and demonstrative pronouns agree with the noun in this way, in place of using the modifying genitive.

16. cui . . . crēderētur: relative clause of result best translated by inserting could. As a consequence of his being one of these the charge could be given him.

17. adferrent: as it stands for nūntiārent it needs no other object than the infinitive clause. Trans. brought (word).

17. male: unsuccessfully.

19. fōrtūnā: here personified, so the preposition ā stands with it.

20. cōpiīs: see group OP-.

21. interiisset: a subord. clause in indirect discourse for the fut. perf. Cf. note on id sē fēcissent, p. 1, l. 15.

24. perīculō: danger from them.

24. vel . . . vel: old imperative of volo. See group VOL-.

26. ad hōc cōnsilium . . . accēderent: approved (of) this suggestion.

1. plērīque: very many, opposed to plūrimī in l. 9 below, which is much stronger.

2. cōnficerētur: negative purpose clause after verb of hindering (G. 331, l. 2, third example; note translation; H. 505, II, 1).

2. obstitit: study group STA-.

2. idem: neuter subject accus. of expedīre.

3. summās imperī: summa, frequently a noun in Nepos; the phrase is equivalent to summa imperia.

4. quō: for eō enim, meaning Darius.

6. poenās datūrōs: punishment was conceived as a debt to be paid (given) by the one having done wrong, and inflicted (taken) by the one wronged. Hence this phrase in the text, and the opposite supplicium sūmere dē aliquō.

6. adeō sē abhorrēre ā: was so little in accord with.

9. plūrimī: cf. plērīque above in l. 1.

9. nōn dubitāns: trans. affirmatively by one word. The accus. and infin. usually follows nōn dubitō in Nepos as here; but in most writers quīn and subjunct. when the meaning is doubt.

10. multīs cōnsciīs: expresses cause in the abl. abs.; trans. by a clause with since.

11. rūrsus: see group VERT-.

12. nōn valuit: did not prevail.

13. amīcior: i.e., he, Miltiades, not ratiō.

20. hostem: with dat. this is used adjectively, as amīcus, inimīcus.

21. Sardīs: accus. plur.; an i stem.

21. expūgnāssent: the revolt of Asiatic Greeks in 499 B.C. against Persia, in which they had been assisted by Athens and Eretria. They took and burned Sardis, chief city of Lydia. This, however, roused the Lydians against them, and, compelled to retreat, they were defeated at Ephesus. The Athenians and Eretrians returned home, and the Persians regained mastery of the Greek cities in Asia.

23. celeriter: yet Eretria held out for a six days' siege, and then was taken through the action of traitors.

24. gentis: loosely referring to Eretriam as if Eretriēnsēs stood there; trans. of this community.

24. abreptōs . . . mīsērunt: the English idiom requires two finite verbs with conjunction; trans. as if abripuērunt et mīsērunt.

25. rēgem: the king was then living at Susa, where these people were allowed to reside.

Page 5. 1. Marathōna: this was only a short sail from Eretria. The form is accus. sing. of Greek third declens. (G. 63, c; H. 68). It is in apposition with campum; in trans. remember that in English we say city of Rome, for urbs Rōma.

2. oppidō: urbe would be better, as he means Athens; there was a village as well as a plain of Marathon. Oppidum is rarely used of a capital city; once by Livy, and several times by Nepos.

2. passuum: not by our reckoning; pace with us is the same as step, the space included between the feet in walking. The Roman pace was double ours, the space passed over between the foot-falls of the same foot. Yet the Roman mile was somewhat shorter than ours.

3. tumultū: used by the Romans particularly of a rebellion or insurrection right at home, and consequently dangerous. Hence it is chosen here to lay stress upon the suddenness and danger of this bellum.

4. Lacedaemoniīs: as the most powerful state in Greece; the Argives alone of the Peloponnesians did not follow the Lacedaemonian standard in war. Both Scythians and Ionians had appealed to the Spartans for help against the Persians, but in vain.

6. quī: the relative is attracted into agreement with its predicate appositive hēmerodromoe, instead of being quod to conform to its antecedent generis.

6. hēmerodromoe: Greek noun of second declens. (G. 43, d; H. 54, note 1). Keep the same word in English. The performances of some of these runners were most extraordinary. After the battle of Plataea, one of them ran from the battlefield to Delphi and back (perhaps 112 miles altogether) in one day. In the present instance Phidippus reached Sparta (more than 125 miles distant) on the second day.

8. auxilio: why abl.? (G. 243, e; H. 414, IV.).

8. creant: why present? Cf. revertitur, p. 2, l. 21.

8. praetōrēs: not comparable to the Roman officials of classical times, but as in the earliest use of the word from its etymology, leaders, generals; see group 1-; Ascon. on Cic. Verres 1, 14, says: Veterēs, omnēs magistrātūs quibus pārēret exercitus, praetōrēs appellāvērunt. The quī . . . praeessent seems to be added to prevent misunderstanding of Nepos' use of the term. Ten generals were chosen yearly.

10. contentiō: examine group TEN-; the contentiō is explained by the double indirect question which follows.

10. moenibus: an abl. of means, perhaps best trans. by behind; in contrast to aciē below, which seems to express manner.

11. dēcernerent: study group CER-, CRE: decide (the matter), then with aciē making the meaning more definite, fight it out, or decide by a pitched battle.

12. Unus . . . māximē: a strengthened superlative as in p. 1, l. 3; trans. was urgent above all the others.

12. prīmō quōque tempore: quōque is the abl. of quisque; at the first possible moment.

13. id sī factum esset: sudden change into indirect discourse; cf. p. 1, l. 15, and p. 3, l. 20.

14. et (cīvibus): correlative to et (hostes) below.

14. cum vidērent: give direct form.

15. eōrum: more properly suā, referring to subject of vidērent, but the meaning is clear. Notice that in l. 16, in a similar sentence, Nepos uses adversus sē.

15. dēspērārī: impersonally used in the passive as all intrans. verbs are; so audērī and dīmicārī following.

17. exiguīs: belonging to group AG-.

18. tempore: not simply time, but the peril of the time, hence crisis, emergency.

18. auxiliō: why dat.? (G. 233, a; H. 390, I.).

19. Plataeēnsēs: for cīvitātem Plataeēnsium, hence Nepos continues with ea in the following sentence.

19. mīlle: substantive or adjective? Notice the case of mīlitum.

21. quae: trans. yet this; cf. p. 1, l. 7, cūius generis.

22. Quō factum est ut: this and similar expressions frequently recurring in Nepos may be rendered: the result was that; consequently; accordingly.

23. valēret: the logic of the passage seems to be that the soldiers were anxious to fight; so Miltiades, who had most strongly urged taking the field, was the most popular and influential with them of the ten generals.

23. auctoritāte: examine group AVG-.

25. Dein: for deinde.

26. aciē: the order is involved; aciē in abl. abs. with īnstrūctā.

26. regiōne: locative abl. with in omitted because of modifier apertissimā (G. 258, f. 2; H. 425, II. 2); the meaning is at once explained by the parenthesis, viz., not perfectly open, as we say open in contrast with wooded country.

27. rārae: scattered, i.e., not in clumps, but each tree by itself apart from the rest.

Page 6. 1. et . . . et: emphatic correlatives; not only . . . but also.

2. trāctū: line, roughly formed by these single scattered trees.

8. peditum centum mīlia: only half of the Persian infantry was engaged in the battle. It appears that the Persians had already begun to embark their troops so as to attack Athens from the Saronic gulf. Some reports have it that the Persian cavalry was not present.

9. tantō: join with plūs, abl. expressing degree of difference.

11. prōflīgārint = prōflīgāverint: result clauses often keep a perfect subjunct. instead of conforming to the general law for sequence of tenses; so petierint (-īverint) below. (G. 287, ℅; H. 495, VI.).

12. petierint = petīverint: do not limit yourself to seek in trans. this word; here ran for.

13. adhūc = ad hōc tempus.

13. nōbilius: trans. the whole sentence freely, using a superlative in English: this is, etc.

13. nūlla: the negative may be put in trans. with the adverb umquam. Later Greek history affords several instances which deserve mention in connection with this statement; e.g., Cunaxa, near Babylon, where the 14,000 Greek troops met great odds, and the battles of Alexander the Great with the Persians at Issus and Arbela, in which he defeated armies outnumbering his ten and twenty to one.

14. prōstrāvit: from prōsternō.

15. Cūius vīctōriae: join with praemium.

15. aliēnum: out of the way; inappropriate; see group AL-, ALI-.

16. quō: used when there is a comparative in the clause (G. 317, b; H. 497, II. 2).

19. rārī et tenuēs: infrequent and simple: these have but one adjective to correspond to both, viz., effūsī, which describes the later distinctions as frequent and extravagant.

20. obsolētī: corresponding to glōriōsī; it implies that the distinctions no longer conferred any great honor. Nepos probably has in mind the Roman triumphs. At first granted only for distinguished services and conferring great honor upon the recipient, later they were easily obtained and became nothing unusual, though their splendor increased.

21. huic: familiarly, as we use "our."

23. tālis: the following.

23. tribūtus est: in trans. bring in ut cum immediately after these words.

23. porticū: the market-places of many Greek cities were surrounded by roofed colonnades, which served as pleasant places for walks and meetings, as they afforded protection from the heat of the sun and from bad weather.

23. quae: feminine by attraction to Poecile its pred. appositive, instead of agreeing with its antecedent porticū.

23. Poecile: a feminine substantive from a Greek adjective ποικίλος, ποικίλη; it means painted, adorned, and strictly agrees with στοά = porticus. From it the Stoic philosophers took their name, as Zeno, the founder of the school, and his followers used to have their meetings here.

25. prīma: in the foreground.

3. largītiōne: Nepos refers to the pay given for attendance at the popular assembly, at the courts, etc.; he also refers to the distribution of entrance money to the theatre. But as all this was done not by the officials themselves, but by the state in legal course, the magistrates were not to be held responsible as they would properly be at Rome in similar cases. Nepos has applied to Athens the practices which prevailed at Rome.

4. Dēmētriō: a distinguished orator and statesman who ruled Athens well from 317–307 B.C., after which he was banished, and the fickle people threw down these (360) statues.

7. barbarōs: here the Persians; see on barbarōrum, p. 2, l. 6.

7. adiūverant: after the Ionic revolt all the islands of the Aegean had been forced into subjection to the Persians.

8. plērāsque . . . Parum: some accounts say that Paros was the first island visited. This island is now, as it was then, famed for its marble.

10. ēlātam: proud of.

10. ōrātiōne: by persuasion.

10. reconciliāre: see group CAL-.

11. ē nāvibus ēdūxit: trans. by one word.

12. vīneīs ac testūdinibus: the vineae were wooden sheds with strong sheltering roofs, covered with turf or skins as a protection against fire-darts. Under these the soldiers could work or advance against the enemy's wall (see Fig. 1). The testudines were sometimes on wheels and contained battering-rams. This name was also given to a body of men peculiarly massed so as to be protected by overlapping shields (see Fig. 2). We know that machines similar to the first described were used in sieges long before Miltiades by the Assyrians and Babylonians. But if the statement of another writer is correct, that the Athenians first used them in the siege of Samos, 368 B.C., Nepos is in error here, and is again (see largītione, p. 7, l. 3) confusing Greek and Roman customs.

15. propius mūrōs : propius, as if a preposition, takes accus. (G. 261, a; H. 437, 1).

13. in eō esset ut : a frequent phrase in Nepos, which may be rendered personally though the Latin is always impersonal : was on the point of.

14. in continentī : a fire on the mainland could not be seen from Paros; probably it was on one of the more distant Cyclades.

15. nēsciō quō : practically an indefinite adjective having no influence upon the construction (G. 202, a; 334, e; H. 191, note; 529, 5, 3).

17. utrīsque vēnit : the subject of vēnit is the clause sīgnum . . . datum (esse).

18. sīgnum : fire-signals were frequently used in war by the Persians. Later, word was carried in this way over the Aegean sea to the Persian king, that Athens had been taken a second time by his troops.

21. totidem: the return of the whole fleet unsuccessful shows that no serious attempt to capture Paros had been made. So argued the citizens and charged treason.

21. atque: as, when following expressions of likeness, similarity.

23. prōditiōnis: a causal genitive (G. 220; H. 409, III., note 2).

24. expūgnāre: trans. by the perfect infin. in English.

26. oppūgnandō: compare with expūgnāre in meaning, and see group PVG-.

Page 8. 1. verba fēcit: of formal speech before a court.

2. Stēsagorās: a mistake as his brother Stesagoras had died before Miltiades went to the Chersonēsus.

2. capitis: this term includes life, freedom, civil rights. Usually in Nepos it means the first. For genitive cf. prōditiōnis above, but see G. 220 a; H. 410, III., note 2.

3. absolūtus: supply est from multātus est and insert but in trans. between the clauses.

3. līs: strife; law-suit, but here for damages or money alternative probably proposed by defendant himself. In Athenian courts, the accuser, and also the accused if the latter was adjudged guilty, proposed alternative punishments. One of the two must be adopted. Cf. the well-known case of Socrates.

4. talentīs: originally a measure of nearly one hundredweight; later much less, signifying a value of gold or silver, the former ten times that of the latter. Here the Attic silver talent $1080, is meant.

5. sūmptus: belongs to group EM-.

8. crīmine Pariō: although Paros afforded the pretext for the accusation. Consult group CER-, CRE-.

10. Pīsistratī tyrannidem: including the rule of his sons. Pisistratus himself ruled justly and well, but his son Hippias became cruel and a tyrant in our sense. He was banished in 510 B.C.

11. extimēscēbant: the habitual state of mind. Hence the imperfect.

13. versātus: a frequent. of vertō, used often in reflexive or middle sense, gets to imply great familiarity with a place (live) or a performance (engage in). Here translate, having frequently held commands and offices.

13. prīvātus: i.e., only that.

15. quōs: accus. expressing duration of time just as its antecedent does; the clause quōs habitārat, modifying annōs like an adjective, may be freely rendered, of his residence.

17. tyrannus: note from the definition following, the difference between the ancient and modern use of the word. It is easy to see how our use of the word was developed from the abuse of power by most tyrants. Cf. the Roman idea of rēx.

20. potestāte sunt: cf. p. 2, l. 13, erat dignitāte.

25. laus: probably belongs to group CLV-.

26. haec populus respiciēns: the people taking these things into consideration. For populus see group PLE-, PLV-.

THEMISTOCLES.

SYNOPSIS. — The youth of Themistocles (1). Themistocles induces the Athenians to use the revenue from the mines owned by the state in building a fleet. With this fleet he vanquishes the foes of Athens. At the beginning of the second Persian war he interprets the oracle of Apollo about wooden walls (2). He has a battle with the king's sea-forces at Artemisium (3). Through the efforts of Themistocles the allied Greek fleet defeats the Persians at Salamis (4). Themistocles persuades Xerxes to return to Asia (5). He founds Piraeus the port of Athens, and begins the rebuilding of the walls of Athens (6). His cunning enables him to outwit the Lacedaemonians who try to stop the rebuilding (7). Themistocles is banished because of the jealousy of his fellow-citizens; after wandering about for some time he comes to Ephesus (8). He writes to Artaxerxes, the Persian king, suing for friendship (9). The king meets his overtures kindly and bestows Magnesia upon him. Themistocles dies (10).

FIG. 3. — THEMISTOCLES.

CHRONOLOGY. — 530 (about): Themistocles born. 485–465: Xerxes, king of the Persians. 484 (482?): Themistocles elected archon, founds Piraeus and increases the Athenian fleet. 480: Battles of Thermopylae, Artemisium and Salamis. 478–476:

Rebuilding of the Athenian walls, improvements at Piraeus. 471 ff.: Themistocles banished, finally takes refuge with the Persian king. 465–425: Artaxerxes I (Longimanus) king of Persia. 460 (about): Death of Themistocles.

Page 9. 1. Themistoclēs, Neoclī fīlius, Athēniēnsis: these words serve as a title, having no grammatical connection with what follows; so also the beginning of Alcibiades and Epaminondas. See note on Milt., p. 1, l. 1, where Nepos begins somewhat differently.

1. Neoclī: a genitive from a nominative Neoclēs of the third declension (G. 43, a; H. 68, 1, 2).

1. Hūius: the genitive depends on adulēscentiae with which ineuntis agrees. Trans. the faults of his early youth.

2. vītia: see group VI-, VIC-.

3. anteferātur . . . putentur: the use of the present tense in a secondary sequence goes to show that this opinion still prevailed in the time of Nepos.

5. generōsus: i.e., he belonged to the Eupatridae or nobles.

5. Acarnānam: a substantive; with substantives denoting persons, the substantive giving the people's name is regularly joined, not the adjective formed from it; e.g., rēx Persēs, but nāvis Persica.

7. minus: less, then too little; here almost equivalent to nōn.

7. parentibus: for the dat. see G. 235 and 232, c. note; H. 384, 4, n. 3.

7. līberius: too luxuriously; the comparative may often be trans. by too.

8. neglegēbat: wasted; lit. was careless of. See group LEG-.

9. Quae contumēlia . . . ērēxit: yet this disgrace did not crush but roused him.

11. tōtum: agrees with sē; trans. by an adverb.

13. iūdiciīs prīvātīs: i.e., contentions between individuals who disputed about property, etc., while iūdicia pūblica would mean criminal cases in which there had been a violation of the laws of the state.

13. versābātur: busied himself; see on versātus, p. 8, l. 13.

13. cōntiōnem: see group VEN-.

14. prōdībat: appeared as speaker.

15. opus: in predicate apposition with quae.

16. eadem: object. of explicābat; not in agreement with ōrātiōne.

17. prōmptus: see group EM-; cf. sūmptus, p. 8, l. 5; p is not etymologically connected with either.

18. īnstantibus: the present.

Page 10. 1. capessendae reī pūblicae: in handling affairs of state, i.e., in public life as contrasted with his activity heretofore in the concerns of private individuals.

2. bellō: see group DVA-, DVI-.

2. Corcȳraeō: a mistake; the war was with Aegīna, 482 B.C.

2. praetor: Themistocles was archon eponymus in 481 B.C. Perhaps that is referred to here; but see note on praetōrēs, p. 5, l. 8.

5. metallīs: this comes from a Greek word meaning to search or pry into. Metallum first means the place where the search is carried on, i.e., mine as here; then, transferred to the thing found in the metallum, it gives us our word metal.

5. largītiōne magistrātuum: a mistake like that in Milt. 6, 4; see note on largītiōne, p. 7, l. 3. The magistrates were not at fault. The money derived from these mines had hitherto been divided among the people according to law. They were the silver mines of Mount Laurium in the southeastern promontory of Attica. The privilege of working these was rented out to private parties, who paid the state a stipulated sum affording a public revenue, quae ex metallīs redībat.

8. Corcȳraeōs; praedōnēs: doubtful; it is generally accepted that the second Persian war prevented the Athenians from using their new fleet against other enemies.

10. in quō: and by so doing.

10. cum . . . tum: not only, but also.

10. dīvitiīs ōrnāvit = locuplētāvit, p. 2, l. 10.

12. quantae salūtī: how beneficial; literally, for how great safety (G. 233 a; H. 390, I.).

13. bellō Persicō: i.e., the second Persian war, 480 B.C.

15. quantās: as.

16. hūius enim: the sentence is interrupted by these words, and everything that follows down through fuērunt may be considered as a long parenthesis; the first or main sentence is then taken up again in a different form by the words cūius dē adventū cum; the length of the parenthesis accounts for the writer's forgetfulness; mīsērunt is the main verb of the sentence, and forms the conclusion of all that precedes.

17. nāvium longārum: ships of war, so called from their long narrow shape in contrast with the rounder, fuller shape of merchant or transport vessels, nāvēs onerāriae.

19. exercitūs: Nepos frequently uses this for cōpiās.

19. septingenta: probably Nepos is following Herodotus here as he does for the number of the triremes, and we may assume that he wrote MDCC and not DCC; 400,000 is surely much too large a proportion of cavalry if we retain the text reading 700,000, instead of 1,700,000, as the number of the infantry.

19. terrestrēs: infantry contrasted with cavalry.

20. adventū: here means advance.

21. māximē Athēniēnsēs petī dīcerentur: it was reported that the attack was directed chiefly against the Athenians, lit. the Athenians were said to be aimed at especially.

23. cōnsultum: cf. dēlīberātum, p. 1, l. 10.

23. quidnam facerent: indirect question object of cōnsultum (G. 334; H. 529, I.).

24. Dēlīberantibus: cf. p. 1, l. 10 and 13, where dēlīberāre and cōnsulere are used interchangeably.

24. respondit ut . . . mūnīrent: respondit here is equivalent to replied directing them to, etc. (G. 331; H. 498, II.).

24. moenibus: see group MV-.

25. quō valēret: what it meant, lit. in what direction it had force.

26. persuāsit . . . esse: cf. this with note on respondit ut . . . mūnīrent in l. 24. The two verbs seem to have exchanged constructions ; but here persuāsit means said convincingly, and so is followed by the infinitive in ind. discourse.

Page 11. 2. eum enim . . . līgneum: for (he said, supplied from persuāsit) that was what the god meant by a wooden wall. What is the literal translation?

4. trirēmēs: so called from having three banks of oars arranged diagonally over one another (see Fig. 4). There were also ships having four or five banks, as also with one or two. The Athenians evidently judged the triremes easiest to manage, and so most effective in war.

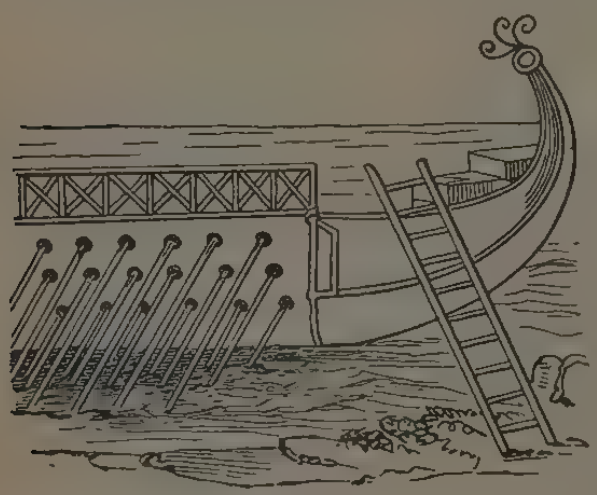

FIG. 4. — TRIREME

5. Salamīna: in the Saronic gulf, half-way between Athens and Megara. After a long war between these for its possession, the Spartans, chosen arbitrators, gave it to Athens in the time of the law-giver Solon.

FIG. 5. — RUINS OF THE ACROPOLIS.

FIG. 6. - ACROPOLIS RESTORED.

5. dēportant: this removal took place after the battle of Thermopylae.

5. arcem: see group ARC-; the Acropolis, which served alike as fort and sanctuary; the beauty of the works of art with which it was adorned when restored by Pericles after its destruction in this second Persian war, is famed down to the present day (see Figs. 5 and 6).

5. ad sacra prōcūranda: the care of performing the religious services; cf. oppida tuenda, p. 3, l. 13.

8. Hūius cōnsilium: his (Them.) suggestion.

10. dēlēctī: the Peloponnesian contingent was 4,000; others to the number of 3,000 joined them. The Lacedaemonians were quite indifferent, for they might have sent twenty times as many as they did.

11. Thermopylās: literally meaning hot gates, called so from sulphur springs found there. It was a narrow pass through which ran the road from Thessaly to the south, lying between Malis and East Locris. At this point the road ran from west to east, and the Malic gulf was upon one side, while the mountain Callidromus rose steep and sheer on the other (see map).

12. Ī: not all perished; for, on the third day Leonidas, having learned that his position had been turned, owing to the betrayal to the Persians of a pass higher up the mountain, dismissed all his own followers except his immediate body guard of 300 Spartans, 700 Thespians who refused to depart, and 400 Thebans whom he kept as hostages, being suspicious of their fidelity. These last surrendered to the Persians as soon as they dared. The Spartans and Thespians all perished.

12. vim hostium: i.e., the great number of the enemy.

14. trecentārum: in round numbers; more exactly 271.

15. Artemisium: name given to a temple of Artemis on the northern point of Euboea.

19. parī proeliō discesserant: had parted leaving the battle undecided, the subject of discesserant must be supplied from classis commūnis Graeciae.

21. superāsset: for superāvisset, not conquer here, but sail around; 200 Persian ships were sent for this purpose, but were shipwrecked.

21. ancipitī premerentur perīculō: they might be threatened by danger from both sides; on ancipitī see group CAP-.

23. apud Salamīna: off Salamis. The real reason for this retreat was the doubtful issue of the second battle at Artemisium, and the disaster to the Greeks at Thermopylae. Xerxes could easily block the Eurīpus (the strait between Euboea and the mainland), having won his way past Thermopylae.

26. accessit: used with accus. often in Nepos; we should expect ad.

26. astū: i.e., Athens except the Acropolis and Piraeus.

26. dēfendentibus: those left behind made an ineffectual attempt to defend the citadel.

Page 12. 1. incendiō dēlēvit: only the buildings on the Acropolis; the city itself was burned the following year by Mardonius.

2. cum: begin the translation with this word; cf. p. 1, l. 1 and 8.

4. discēderent: their purpose was to go to the isthmus of Corinth.

6. āiēbat: see group AG-.

6. dispersōs: agrees with eōs, omitted subject accusative of perītūrōs (esse), which depends on testābātur.

6. id: subject accus. of fore depending on adfīrmābat.

7. rēgī: Eurybiades was not king, but Spartan commander and admiral of the entire fleet; for, although the Spartans furnished but 16 ships, the Athenians, surrendering their just claim to the leadership by sea, out of devotion to the cause of all Greece, granted them the chief command by sea as well as by land.

7. summae: a noun substantive as often in Nepos. It is dative after the compound verb praeerat; with imperī praeerat trans. held the chief command.

9. vellet: subjunctive by attraction to movēret (G. 342; H. 529, II.).

9. dē servīs suīs quem habuit fidēlissimum = servōrum suōrum fidēlissimum.

10. rēgem: i.e., Xerxes.

11. suīs verbīs: i.e., speaking for, in the name of, Themistocles.

13. cōnfectūrum; oppressūrum: the subject is eum to be supplied = rēgem.

14. brevī: for brevī tempore.

15. Hōc eō valēbat: the object of this was, lit. this had force in this direction; cf. almost the same phrase, p. 10, l. 25.

16. ad dēpūgnandum: to a decisive battle; cf. the force of dē in dēvīcisset, p. 2, l. 12, and dēvīcta, p. 13, l. 12.

20. explicārī: to be brought into action, lit. to be unfolded.

20. potuerit: see note on prōflīgārint, p. 6, l. 11.

21. cōnsiliō: cleverness. After the battle the Spartans awarded to Themistocles the prize for wisdom, and that for bravery to Eurybiades. Still this shrewdness of Themistocles was two-edged, as he undoubtedly hoped by it to secure his own safety in the very probable event of a Persian victory.

21. Themistoclī: genitive; see note on Neoclī, p. 9, l. 1.

23. Hīc: an adverb; the same subject is continued.

23. tantās . . . reliquiās cōpiārum: Xerxes lost 200 ships at Salamis, the Greeks 40. About Artemisium he lost 600 chiefly by storms. Yet he was still possessed of far more ships than the Greeks. His losses at Thermopylae were more than made good to him by accessions along the line of march.

25. eōdem: not to be taken with gradū. It stands for Themistoclē.

25. gradū dēpulsus est: dislodged from his vantage-ground, a phrase borrowed from the technicalities of fencing.

Page 13. 2. id agī: that plans were on foot: lit. that this was being done.

2. ut dissolverētur; exclūderētur: translate into Eng. by active infinitives, with bridge as the object of the first and him of the second.

2. pōns: Xerxes had caused two pontoon bridges, one consisting of 360, the other of 314 vessels, to be built across the Hellespont. Both of these had been broken apart by a storm when the king arrived. But his fleet had reached there from Salamis before him and transported the army across. Probably the Greeks had no serious idea of following Xerxes.

4. sex mēnsibus: in Ag. 4, 4, Nepos gives the time occupied by the retreat as one year; in neither statement is he accurate, as four months was the real time.

6. reversus est: read the account of the retreat in Grote, Part II, chap. xli (near end).

10. tropaeō: here synonymous with victōriā, as the trophy was the sign of victory. The trophy was erected by the Greeks and Romans on a field of battle in honor of the god of war; it consisted of a tree trunk lopped of its branches, and adorned with some of the finest spoils.

13. neque: adversative, but not; cf. p. 2, l. 16.

14. Phalēricō portū: this was an open roadstead affording protection neither against storms nor enemies' attacks.

16. triplex Pīraeī portus: the Piraeus was a rocky peninsula commanded by the height Munychia, and had three (triplex) excellent harbors, viz. the Piraeus in the narrower sense, and two smaller ones, Aphrodisia (Munychia) and Zea (see map opposite p. 9). Themistocles began this work in 482–1 as archon, but, owing to interruption and injury from the Persians, the walls were not completed till 477, when the Piraeus had a complete circumvallation of its own, and was connected by "the long walls" with the city, about four miles away.

16. Pīraeī: cf. Chersonēsī, p. 2, l. 24, though it may be a loose descriptive genitive like our "of" before names of places.

17. dīgnitāte: stateliness; it is even suspected by some that Themistocles wished to change the site of the city to the Piraeus.

19. suō: emphasize, to himself.

21. excursiōnēs: not to be translated as p. 2, l. 9.

21. quā: abl. of cause; causam is its antecedent.

21. quā negārent oportēre, etc., for saying that no city . . . ought to have walls; negō (see group AG-) is usually broken up into its component parts (say . . . not), and the negative is put in the dependent clause following.

23. possīderent: avoid translating this verb possess; it comes from possīdō, not possideō.

23. aedificantēs = quōminus aedificārent: the participle indicates that the Athenians were already at work on the walls.

24. Hōc longē . . . valēbant: this had an object quite other than they wished to have appear; aliō is an adverb here implying comparison, so atque is to be translated than.

Page 14. 3. prīncipātū: the first place among the Greek states; the so-called "hegemony" (from ἡγεμών: leader), which included the chief command in war. Hitherto Sparta had maintained this position.

3. sibi . . . fore: they would have; sibi, dat. of possession.

4. quam īnfīrmissimōs: as weak as possible; quam with superlative signifies the highest degree possible. (G. 93, b; H. 170, 2 [2]); cf. ūnus māximē, p. 1, l. 3.

7. dēsiērunt: from dēsinō; the subject is Athēniēnsēs, which should be in the text.

10. ut (reliquī lēgātī) exīrent: depends on praecēpit below.

10. tuendō: dat. of purpose; satis altī tuendō: high enough for defense.

12. opus facerent: these words continue his instructions and depend on praecēpit.

12. neque: for nēve = et nē.

16. sacellīs: a diminutive from sacrum (cf. castellum from castrum); see group SAG-, SAC-; these were small enclosed bits of ground consecrated to a divinity; they contained an altar, but were not roofed over.

16. cōnstārent: of course not to be taken literally; but even then it implies an exaggeration of the statement of Thucydides, who says that the walls contained "many columns too taken from sepulchres." Consult Grote, Part II, chap. xliv.

18. magistrātūs: nominally two kings having a council of 28 old men called the Gerusia, stood at the head of the Spartan state, but a board of five officers called Ephors, exercised oversight over everything, having power to accuse and arrest even the kings. Naturally the Ephors are meant here.

18. quam longissimē: see on quam īnfīrmissimōs, p. 14, l. 4.

20. conlēgās: Aristides and Abronichus.

23. mūnītiōnis: i.e., the fortification was nearly complete.

24. penes quōs: in whose hands.

25. imperium: properly this means the command in war, which was the prerogative of the kings and was seldom interfered with by the ephors; hence unsuitable here. The proper word would be potestās.

Page 15. 1. quārē aequum esse = ob eamque causam aequum esse: this depends on contendit, and is parallel with esse dēlāta.

1. illōs: i.e., the ephors, subject of mittere, which has virōs for object.

3. sē: i.e., Themistocles.

4. retinērent: in the principal clause in indirect discourse, representing an imperative (G. 339; H. 523, III.).

4. Gestus est eī mōs: his suggestion was followed; more literally, his way was done.

7. praedīxit: warned them beforehand; prae has its own force in this compound, while dīxit has borrowed some of the force of iūssit, and takes the construction of verbs of bidding, urging.

7. ut nē: equivalent to nē alone, common in Cicero, rare elsewhere.

11. līberrimē: with perfect frankness.

12. quod . . . possent: we should not look for this clause till after saepsisse, which, with the rest of the clause to which it belongs, serves as the antecedent; perhaps it is brought in early to disarm in part the wrath of the Lacedaemonians.

12. deōs pūblicōs: the gods worshiped everywhere in Greece; patriōs those worshiped in Attica proper; penātēs, those of each family.

14. dēfendere: Themistocles cleverly words it as if the object in building the walls were simply the defense of the gods; in eō: refers to mūrōs saepsisse; supply quicquam before quod inūtile.

16. ut: as.

16. oppositum: conforms in gender to the emphatic predicate appositive prōpūgnāculum, instead of to urbem.

17. apud quam iam bis: i.e., through the battles of Marathon and Salamis; the expression is a figurative one with no especial reference to fighting on sea as opposed to fighting on land; apud quam = et apud eam, hence the infinitive construction is continued.

17. rēgiās: in narrating Greek history, rēx and rēgius unqualified are constantly used of the king of Persia and his concerns.

19. quī = cum iī, causal clause since they.

22. sē: i.e., Themistocles.

22. remitterent: cf. note on retinērent in l. 4, above.

24. Tamen: in emphatic position; in spite of all these great services.

25. timōrem: see on extimēscēbant, p. 8, l. 11.

26. testulārum suffrāgiīs: the so-called ostracism. After the banishment of Hippias, the Athenians, in order to prevent the rise of tyrants, hit upon a plan by which men whose influence and power seemed dangerous to liberty, might be exiled for a term of years (originally ten, later fixed at five), with no loss of property or honor; 6000 votes for this purpose must be cast to bring it about, and, as they wrote the name of the obnoxious citizen on potsherds (ὄστρακα = testulae), they named this action ostracism, or the judgment of the potsherds.

1. habitātum: a favorite way with Nepos of expressing purpose after verbs of motion is the supine in um; cf. dēlīberātum, p. 1, l. 10.

2. virtūtēs: probably services to Argos.

2. Lacedaemoniī . . . mīsērunt, etc.: 473 B.C. Pausanias the Spartan king had been convicted of treasonable correspondence with the Persian king. After his death letters were found in his house which implicated Themistocles.

4. rēge Persē: this differs from rēge Persārum by implying that the king is of the same blood as his subjects, which need not be true of the second phrase.

4. prōditiōnis: with damnātus est, not with crīmine.

7. Argīs: plural as in the case of many ancient towns, probably originally adjectives, e.g., the Argive villages; the Athenian villages; then becoming Argī and Athēnae. Cf. Argōs, l. 1.

8. iīs: sibi would be more regular, but as Nepos has already used sē in this clause referring to Themistocles the subject of animadvertisset, he could hardly avoid the change of pronoun.

10. Molossūm = Molossōrum. They lived originally in the interior of Epirus, but later possessed the whole country. Their kings claimed descent from Neoptolemus, son of Achilles.

11. hospitium: guest-friendship was a tie between families of different states, which assured to members of either family a welcome suited to their rank if they visited the state of the other. Even whole states had their guest-friends (hospitēs pūblicī), who entertained their ambassadors and protected their citizens. Thucydides tells us that Admētus was previously an enemy of Themistocles, who had thwarted him in some demand at Athens.

11. in praesentiā: cf. p. 8, l. 6.

12. religiōne: conscientiousness, i.e., owing to his fear of the gods, whom, by this action as a suppliant, Themistocles enlisted on his side.

12. sē: refers to the subject of adripuit, while rēx Admētus is to be supplied as the subject of tuērētur.

13. receptum tuērētur: break up into reciperet et tuērētur; cf. abreptōs mīsērunt, p. 4, l. 24; the fact of being received is not doubted, but the obligation resting upon the king is to be strengthened by an appeal to the gods.

14. quod summā colēbātur caerimōniā: which was regarded with the highest veneration.

16. fidem: protection, a frequent meaning of this word, usually in this phrase.

16. quam praestitit: praestāre is used both transitively and intransitively; here translate and he kept his word, more lit. which he made good.

20. propīnquō: i.e., near the borders of Greece.

20. tūtō: an adverb.

20. versārī: live: see note on versātus, p. 8, l. 13.

20. Pydnam: a Greek city at the foot of Mount Olympus, in Macedonia; famous for being the scene of the defeat of the last Macedonian king Perseus by the Roman consul Aemilius Paullus, in 168 B.C.

21. esset: subjunct. as it gives the thought of Admetus. (G. 341, d; H. 528, I.)

22. nautīs: i.e., no one on board knew him.

23. Naxum: the largest of the Cyclades, famed for its grape-culture. The Naxians had revolted from the Athenian confederacy, and an army under Cimon (son of Milt.) lay before the capital city (also called Naxos) when Themistocles was driven in there; the Athenians conquered it and made it a tributary subject.

27. clārissimī: so distinguished; a Latin superlative is often best rendered by a strengthened positive.

Page 17. 2. salō: i.e., at some distance from the shore, the roadstead in opposition to the harbor.

2. Themistoclēn: accus. sing.; the ending of the Greek first declension.

2. grātiam rettulit: grātiam referre, to show gratitude; gratiam habēre, to feel gratitude.

6. plērōsque: viz., rērum scrīptōrēs.

6. ita: immediately defined by the following clause, and may be omitted in trans.

6. Xerxe: emphatic; opposed to Artaxerxēn below.

7. potissimum: in preference to all others.

8. aetāte: i.e., the period of time in which he lived.

11. hīs verbīs: a descriptive (expressing quality) abl. modifying epistulam: with the following contents.

11. Themistoclēs, vēnī: I, Themistocles, come; in letter-writing the Latin often uses past tenses because the time of writing is past when the letter is read by the recipient (G. 282; H. 472, 1); the Eng. requires the present tense. So cōnfūgī, l. 21, below.

13. Grāiōrum: an older form for Graecōrum.

14. necesse fuit: was a necessity; Themistocles offers this as in some sort an excuse for himself.

15. īdem: on the other hand, implying opposition, not, as usual, likewise.

16. ipse: sc. esse coepī.

20. circumīrētur: the subject changes as with exclūderētur in parallel passage in 5, 1.

21. cōnfūgī: epistolary perfect for present; see on vēnī, l. 12.

23. erō adeptus: from adipīscor, see group AP-; the present or simple future is often used to trans. a Latin future perfect.

25. quās: accus. direct object of conloquī, used transitively.

Page 18. 1. dēs: subjunctive in a purpose clause with ut depending on rogō.

4. veniam: not a verb, but substantive: veniam dare = to grant a favor.

5. litterīs sermōnīque: by litterīs is meant the Persian literature from which he derived a knowledge of the history, habits, etc., of the people; by sermōnī the language as spoken, i.e., for conversational purposes.

6. ērudītus est: trans. by reflexive.

7. verba fēcisse: see on verba fēcit, p. 8. l. 1.

9. illud: this, viz., that, etc., explained by what follows.

10. vellet: protasis of a vivid future condition, representing volet of the direct discourse.

11. Asiam: originally the word seems to have meant a portion of Lydia only; later (and so here) it refers to Asia Minor, with the exception of Cilicia in the south-eastern part, which from the earliest times was in close connection with Syria. After 133 B.C., the Romans meant by the province of Asia, the middle portion of the west coast.

12. domicilium sibi cōnstituit: established his residence.

13. dōnārat (dōnāverat): it was customary among the Persians for the kings to bestow on persons of high rank certain places to supply certain wants. Still the recipient was at liberty to use the revenue from these places in whatever way he wished. Lampsacus lay on the Hellespont, Myus on the Meander; he received also two other cities, Percote on the Hellespont, and Scepsis in Aeolis. In return for this income Themistocles undertook the defense of these cities against his fellow-countrymen.

13. quidem: emphasizes the word preceding it, and often admits of no translation.

14. praebēret: purpose clause, quae = ut ea; so sūmeret and habēret below.

19. oppidum: usually taken to mean Magnesia, but by some referred to Athens, as it is said that a tomb of Themistocles was found later in the Piraeus.

19. est sepultus (sepeliō): not is or lies buried, but was, i.e., just after his death; but cf. preceding note.

23. neque negat fuisse fāmam: without denying that there was a report; more lit. and he does not deny, etc.

24. sūmpsisse: sc. eum as subject accus. of this inf.; the phrase fuisse fāmam, as it is an expression of saying, governs the accus. and inf.

24. sūmpsisse is from sūmō.

25. sē: accus. subject of posse.

Page 19. 1. clam: see group CEL-.

1. sepulta: sc. esse with ossa for subject depending on memoriae prōdidit.

1. quoniam . . . concēderetur: tells why, as Thucydides says, they did it secretly; quod . . . damnātus tells why the laws forbade, with Thucydides again as authority. Hence the subjunctives.

PAUSANIAS.

SYNOPSIS. — Pausanias defeats Mardonius at Plataea; in his pride over the victory he acts in a way to displease the Spartans (1). He takes Byzantium; treats with Xerxes in reference to bringing Greece under Persian sway. He is recalled to Sparta (2). Unbidden he returns to the army, and by his foolish conduct reveals his treasonable intent. Forced to return home he attempts to get the slaves to revolt (3). Proof of his treason is obtained by the ephors (4). His miserable death by starvation (5).

CHRONOLOGY. — 479: Battle of Plataea. 478–7: The Greeks free Byzantium from the Persians. 476: Pausanias suspected of treason is called home; acquitted of the charge he goes back to Byzantium. The Athenians and many other allies leave the Spartan standard. 470: Pausanias goes over into Aeolia and is again recalled. 467 (about): Death of Pausanias.

3. ēlūxit: see group LVC-.

3. obrutus: in contrast with ēlūxit; choose your word with this in mind. One way would be to use his character instead of he for subject of both verbs.

3. inlūstrissimum: sc. factum: deed.

5. Mardonius: not a Mede, but the son of one of the seven Persian princes, and son-in-law of Darius the previous king, not of Xerxes.

6. manū fortis: i.e., he was personally brave; he lost his life at Plataea.

7. cōnsilī: cf. the use of this word, p. 12, l. 21.

8. virītim: i.e., the leader chose a number of nobles, each of whom chose an additional member; then all of these selected an army of the bravest followers from among the people.

8. haud ita: not very.

9. māgnā: the whole army of the Greeks numbered over 100,000; but only 61,000 of these took part in the battle, viz., the Lacedaemonians, Tegeans and Athenians.

10. plūrima miscēre: to form all sorts of (political) schemes; literally to mix up very many things.

11. in eō: on this account.

12. praeda: (cf. prehendō), that which has been taken = spolia, spoil, one-tenth of which was consecrated to the god of Delphi.

12. tripodem aureum: the middle support of this was encircled by the coils of three serpents, whose heads apparently supported the vessel at the top. The bowl of this one, — they were often used as mixing bowls, — was of gold, the frame-work of bronze. It was carried to Constantinople 800 years later by Constantine the Roman Emperor, and placed in the circus, though its gold had been taken off in the Phocian war. It remains to-day somewhat shattered, but on the lower part the names of the states offering it are still legible (see Fig. 7).

Fig. 7. — The Tripod of Pausanias.

13. posuisset: Pausanias had been commissioned by all the Greeks to set up the tripod; hence the greater his arrogance in the inscription, to which alone and not to the offering of the tripod the Lacedaemonians objected.

13. epigrammate inscriptō: with the inscription, lit. the inscription being inscribed.

15. ergō: here equivalent to causā, rare except in laws, decrees, inscriptions, etc.; it governs the genitive preceding.

16. dedisse: supply sē for its subject.

17. exsculpsērunt: erased, only in this place with this meaning, i.e., chiseled off, not chiseled out or carved, its usual meaning.

2. commūnī: i.e., Graeciae.

2. Hellēspontum: this means not merely the strait by the Thracian Chersonesus, but also all the section lying between the Aegean and Black Seas, on the Hellespont, Propontis and Bosporus. The accusative case here expresses limit of motion; see note on Chersonēsum, p. 1, l. 7.

5. Byzantiō: the Constantinople of to-day; it was a Greek colony founded by Megarians.

8. effūgisse: sc. eōs from hōs as subject.

9. Gongylum: sc. mīsit; this man had been banished from Eretria because of his Persian sympathies, and been made governor by the Persians of a strip of territory near Pergamum.

12. cēperat: epistolary tense; see on vēnī, p. 17, l. 12; so mīsit in the following line.

12. propīnquōs: in predicate apposition with the antecedent of quōs, these to be your relatives.

14. dēs: for subjunctive see G. 267; H. 483.

15. nūptum: the supine from nūbō, expressing purpose; cf. dēlīberātum, p. 1, l. 10; habitātum, p. 16, l. 1.

16. sē: accus. subject of redāctūrum (esse).

16. tē: abl. absolute with adiuvante.

18. certum: not certain, but trustworthy.

18. mittās: dependent on face, an old form for the imperative fac; the full form would be fac (ut) mittās, which is much stronger than the subjunctive alone would have been.

18. cum quō = ut cum eō.

20. necessāriōrum: modified by tam, standing so near himself, i.e., so closely related.

20. māgnō opere: often written māgnopere, an abl. of manner.

20. gāvīsus: from gaudeō.

21. Artabazum: a Persian officer who attended Xerxes on his retreat to the Hellespont; then returned to Mardonius and, after the battle of Plataea, brought off a portion of the Persian army to Byzantium.

22. nē cui reī parcat: leave nothing untried.

24. lātūrum (esse): its subject is eum = Pausaniam, to be supplied; for introductory word of saying cf. prōspera futūra in p. 1, l. 15, and see note on id sī fēcissent in the same place.

2. capitis: placed between accūsātus and absolvitur, really goes with each severally as a causal genitive; cf. for a similar trial Milt. 7, 6.

4. remissus nōn est: they sent out Dorcis in his place, who on his arrival found the leadership transferred to the Athenians.

5. post: adv. usually following when used with abl. expressing the degree of difference, multō.

5. suā sponte: therefore not holding the chief command.

6. dēmentī ratiōne: by his reckless conduct.

6. cōgitāta: substantive here, plans.

7. mōrēs: the habits.

8. cultum: everything having to do with the manner of living, particularly dress, which, however, is singled out for especial emphasis again. The laws of Lycurgus bound the Spartans to the greatest simplicity in dress and food. Their daily food consisted in the far from savory "black soup," viz., swine's flesh cooked in the animal's blood with water and salt.

8. Apparātū rēgiō: i.e., the splendor of a Persian king, not Spartan.

9. veste Mēdicā: the garb of the Medes when in power was adopted later by the Persians of rank; it consisted mainly of bright-colored trousers with a long sweeping over-garment.

9. satellitēs: all these statements are based on Thucydides, I. 130, who refers them to the period before the first recall of Pausanias.

11. perpetī: from perpetior.

11. aditum conveniundī: the gerund is pleonastic, not needed for the sense; admission to an audience.

12. superbē respondēbat: gave haughty replies, similarly crūdēliter imperābat, etc. These last words could only apply to the first period of his presence, as then he held command; everything else he may and probably did continue.

14. locus: properly an appositive with Colōnās, but it has been attracted, as is usual in Latin, into the relative clause and agrees with the relative.

15. cum . . . tum: not only . . . but also.

17. clāvā: this has reference to cylindrical pieces of wood possessed by the ephors, and carried by all generals on expeditions. It was usual for the ephors to wind a narrow strip of leather slantwise around the wooden cylinder, and then to write short secret dispatches lengthwise upon the leather. When the leather was unrolled, merely a series of single letters appeared, having no consecutive meaning. The officer receiving it would wind it about a precisely similar cylinder, thus learning its contents. The cylinder and the message could each be called scytale, of which clāva staff is a literal translation; in the present instance the strip of leather written upon is meant, so use scytale in translating.

17. mōre illōrum: perhaps referring to the scytale as just described; but as brevity and pithiness, to which they were trained from youth, were characteristic of the Spartans, in their usual way, i.e., with laconic (note the origin of our word) brevity, seems a better interpretation. It also accords well with the message following.

20. potentiā: remember the distinction between this and imperium.

20. īnstāns: neuter; qualifies perīculum.

22. licet: should be a past tense as in the time of Nepos there were no longer kings at Sparta.

23. eōrum: i.e., Lacedaemoniōrum.

23. rēgī: Pausanias was regent for Pleistarchus, the son of Leonidas, and consequently enjoyed a king's rights.

26. quod . . . vocātur: this might have been quī . . . vocantur, attracted to Hīlōtae; see on quī, p. 5, l. 6.

Page 23. 1. Hīlōtae: slaves, tillers of the soil for the individual Spartans; probably they were descendants of those of the original inhabitants who had offered most stubborn resistance to the invading Dorians (Spartans). They formed the most numerous portion of the Laconian population, and were watched with great strictness; they attended the Spartans in war, at Plataea numbering no less than 35,000 out of the 45,000 men furnished by the Spartans.

4. quod: because.

4. hārum rērum: in reference to these things, a genitive depending on crīmen.

5. quō arguī posset: of (by) which he could have been convicted; on arguī see group ARG-.

6. clārus: has reference to family and position as well as to deeds.

7. exspectandum: sc. esse; parallel in construction with oportēre, dependent on putābant to be supplied without the negative.

8. Argīlius: not a proper name; a citizen of the town of Argilus in Thrace.

9. cum: translate before interim; cf. cum, p. 1, ll. 1 and 8.

10. eīque in suspiciōnem vēnisset: and suspected; lit. it had come into suspicion to him; although eī is dative and the verb is used impersonally, practically eī is the subject, and so sē is immediately used reflexively referring to it.

12. redīsset: redeō; subjunctive giving the Argilian's reason for being suspicious.

12. super: for.

13. vincla epistulae: the ancients wrote mostly with metal pencils upon tablets smeared upon one side with wax; the rims of these tablets were raised, and when two were placed facing each other and tied with a string, it was customary to place wax upon the knot and stamp upon it the sender's seal. See Figs. 8 and 9 showing writing materials and a case of parchment rolls.

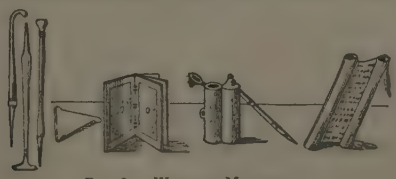

FIG. 8. — WRITING MATERIALS.

FIG. 9. — CASE OF PARCHMENT ROLLS.

14. pertulisset: notice the force of the preposition, to its destination.

15. quae: sc. ea for an antecedent (allusions) which, etc.

16. quae . . . convēnerant: which had been agreed upon.

18. gravitās: the deliberate conduct.

18. hōc locō: in this affair.

19. indiciō: see group DAC-, DIC-.

21. indicī: not a verb but in dat. case from index.

23. Taenarī: locative. This is the Cape Matapan of to-day, the southernmost promontory of Greece.

23. violārī: translate by the active.

23. nefās: i.e., it was an asylum, a place where innocent fugitives and guilty criminals alike might find a safe refuge. The Greeks favored making all temples asylums; the Romans were disposed to limit their number, e.g., the asylum established by Romulus on the Capitol was afterwards made inaccessible by buildings.

24. hanc iūxtā = iūxtā hanc.

25. sub terrā: Thucydides (I. 133) tells us it was a double hut in which the Argilian hid the ephors.

Page 24. 3. causae quid = quae causa.

4. modo: now, i.e., on learning that the Argilian had read his letter.

6. nec = nēve, cf. p. 14, l. 12.

6. sē: refers to Pausanias the subject of the principal verb; so sibi below.

7. dedisset: cf. id sī fēcissent, p. 1, l. 15.

8. sublevāsset: sc. its object from sibi.

11. plācātō: do not confuse plācō appease, and placeō please.

12. in eō esset: see on p. 7, l. 13.

14. eum admonērī: to give him warning.

15. quam . . . sequēbantur: than his pursuers.

16. Minervae quae Chalcioicos vocātur: the walls of this temple of Minerva were covered with plates of bronze; consequently the deity worshiped in the temple was called the "dweller in the bronze house." Thucydides states that Pausanias ran into a small building within the sacred precinct, not into the temple itself. Not merely was it forbidden to seize or kill a person within a temple enclosure, but to allow a person to die there desecrated the spot; hence they carried Pausanias out.

19. dīcitur . . . mātrem . . . vīxisse: more usually in Latin we should have the personal construction, māter dīcitur, etc.

20. vīxisse: was living, representing (vivēbat) of direct discourse rather than vīxit.

21. māgnō nātū: usually grandis nātū; here an abl. of quality.

21. in prīmīs: among the foremost.

22. lapidem: join with attulisse.

24. ēlātus: efferō.

Page 25. 1. eōdem . . . quō: a gorge near Sparta, called Kaiadas.

3. plūribus: the majority.

CIMON.

SYNOPSIS. — Cimon, after his father's death, imprisoned in his stead, gains his freedom through the generous act of his sister (1). He quickly gains for himself the most prominent position in the state and performs great deeds (2). He is banished by popular vote (ostracism); recalled five years later, he restores peace to Greece; then having thoroughly defeated the Persians, he dies of disease in the island of Cyprus (3). The generosity of Cimon (4).

CHRONOLOGY. — 489: Cimon is imprisoned; but later is freed by Callias. 477 ff.: Joint commander with Aristides of the Athenian fleet, he establishes the naval power of Athens; in the years following, he captures Eion and Scyrus. 465 ff.: He conquers the Persians at the Eurymedon both by land and sea; punishes the Naxians and Thasians who had revolted. 462: He is exiled. 458: The Lacedaemonians conquer the Athenians at Tanagra. Cimon is recalled. 449: Cimon dies in Cyprus; his army wins a victory by land and sea after his death.

Page 26. 1. Cimōn: for genealogy see on Cimōnis fīlius, p. 1, l. 1. It was customary in Greece to give the eldest son the name of the grandfather on the father's side.

2. ūsus est: experienced.

3. līitem: see on līs, p. 8, l. 3.

4. dēcessisset: euphemistic for he died; cf. the phrase the departed sometimes heard in a similar sense.

5. cūstōdiā: this statement is more than doubtful. Plutarch in his account does not represent Cimon as placed in prison, while the Attic law which made a son liable for his father's fine, would simply debar the son from exercising his rights as a citizen until this fine was paid.

8. germānam, properly meaning own, i.e., having the same father and the same mother, is here used for half-sister, having the same father but not the same mother. The story may be distrusted. One ancient writer (Andocides) tells us that Cimon was banished for this offense against morality, yet Nepos in another place refers to it as a common practice at Athens.

9. nōn magis . . . quam: this phrase always emphasizes the second member of a comparison; trans. not merely . . . but.

10. eōdem: i.e., as themselves.

10. nātās: participle (nāscor) followed by the abl. of source patre: sc. with it a substantive.

10. uxōrēs: predicate object accusative; with dūcere, it forms a parallel phrase to in mātrimōnium dūcere.

11. hūius coniugī: of marriage with her.

13. metallīs: those at Laurium; see note on p. 10, l. 5.

13. ēgit cum: the Romans chiefly used this phrase of a magistrate discussing something before the assembled people, but gradually came to employ it of pleading with, striving to gain consent of private individuals.

14. sibi: i.e., Callias.

14. impetrāsset: do not confuse impetrō obtain and imperō command.

15. cum: concessive, although.

16. negāvit sē passūram = dīxit sē nōn passūram (esse); negō is regularly treated in this way so that the negation must be put in translation with the following infinitive.

16. passūram: from patior.

17. prōgeniem: son.

17. quoniam: from cum iam, may be translated with its original force in this passage.

18. nūptūram: (esse) from nūbō; dīxit must be supplied from negāvit for this to depend upon; cf. the similar case in Paus. 3, 7, with note on exspectandum, p. 23, l. 7.

3. līberālitātem: see group LIB-.

4. cum . . . tum: both . . . and.

4. iūris cīvīlis: an objective genitive depending on prūden- tiam; it signifies the laws of a single state in distinction from those existing between nations, iūs nātūrāle or iūs gentium.

5. ā puerō: from boyhood.

5. fuerat versātus: a frequent form of the pluperfect in Nepos; for meanings of this word see on versātus, p. 8, l. 13; populum urbānum, etc.: i.e., in a civil capacity he guided the people (as he wished); he was thus both statesman and soldier.

7. plūrimum valuit auctōritāte: he exerted the greatest influence; cf. p. 5, l. 22–3, where auctōritāte is omitted.

7. prīmum: followed up by iterum in the next sentence; Nepos is very inaccurate in what follows. The campaign in Thrace (470) followed the taking of Scyrus (§ 5). Cimon won his double victory — with fleet and army — on the river Eurymedon in Pamphylia in southern Asia Minor (465), and by this put an end to Persian power in any part of Hellas. The sea-fight at Mycale, a promontory opposite Samos, was won by the Greeks under Leotychides the Spartan on the same day on which the battle of Plataea was fought (479), and Cimon had nothing to do with it. Cimon captured Eion at the mouth of the Strymon in Thrace from the Persians and held it against fierce attacks. The site of Amphipolis lay farther up the river, and though Cimon personally did not take part, the first attempt to establish a colony there was made during this campaign. The 10,000 settlers were annihilated by the Thracians during an expedition into the interior. Not till 437 was a permanent colony established at Amphipolis.

10. in colōniam: i.e., ad colōniam cōnstituendam, as settlers; in occasionally denotes purpose.

11. Mycalēn: i.e., Eurymedonta, see note l. 7, primum just above.

11. Cypriōrum et Phoenīcum: a Persian fleet composed of the subject maritime peoples.

12. dēvīctam cēpit = dēvīcit et cēpit; cf. abreptōs mīsērunt, p. 4, l. 24–5.

15. vim: i.e., a Persian land army; cf. vim hostium, p. 11, l. 12.

18. acerbitātem: see group AC-. So long as Aristides lived, the Athenians treated their allies with much consideration; after his death they gradually increased their demands and assumed the position of tyrants rather than leaders of a league.

20. Scȳrum: the inhabitants of this island refused to pay the fine imposed on them for piracy. Cimon found, or pretended to find, here the bones of Theseus the Athenian national hero. He brought these to Athens, where the people built to receive them the Theseum or temple of Theseus.

21. contumācius: with insubordination; see on līberius, p. 9, l. 7.

22. sessōrēs: inhabitants, a meaning which occurs only here.

23. suō adventū: insert merely before this in translating; as a matter of fact Cimon besieged the place for three years (467–465).

23. opulentiā: abl. depending on frētōs (G. 254, v. 2; H. 425, I. 1, note); this wealth came from gold mines in the island and on the mainland of Thrace close by.

24. manubiīs: the money coming from the sale of booty, while praeda is the booty itself. One third usually was put in the treasury (aerārium); a second third went to the soldiers, and the remainder to the general, who, for the most part, expended it on public buildings.

24. quā: where.

25. ōrnāta: Cimon built a strong wall on the southern side; hence some supply here mūnītiōnibus; he also built on the acropolis the temple of Νίκη Ἄπτερος, Wingless Victory.

1. ūnus māximē flōrēret: see on ūnus māximē, p. 1, l. 3.

2. quam: for in quam; the preposition is omitted because it is expressed with the antecedent, and the verb of the antecedent clause must be supplied for this.

3. prīncipēs: cf. prīncipātum, p. 27, l. 2, and prīncipēs, p. 16, l. 8.

4. quod: we should expect quem having the same gender as ὀστρακισμόν; quod refers to the whole idea contained in the expression testārum suffrāgiīs, hence the neuter.

5. exsiliō: the Spartans, in serious plight owing to a rising of the Helots, sent to Athens for help. Cimon induced the Athenians to send troops, but as the Spartans, becoming suspicious of them, sent the men back, the people visited their indignation upon Cimon, accusing him of being opposed to the interests of the people and a sympathizer with Sparta. Probably the reasons given in Milt. 8, 1, in the case of the father, apply here also in the case of the son.

5. celerius: not strictly true, as Cimon wished to rejoin his countrymen at the battle of Tanagra (see below), but was not allowed to do so.

6. paenituit: impersonal as always; followed by accus. and gen.

7. bellumque Lacedaemoniī: the schemes of Pericles for extending Athenian sway over upper Greece received a check in the defeat of the Athenians at Tanagra in Boeotia (458) by a Spartan force; after the victory the Spartans returned to Peloponnesus.

10. Post: separated from quam by tmesis; thus frequently priusquam, antequam; always translate as one word at the point where quam comes in the text.

10. expulsus erat: the perfect indicative usually follows postquam; but whenever a definite amount of time is given, the pluperfect is used. Cimon was recalled in 457; the five years' peace was not arranged till 451.

11. hospitiō: almost all Greek states had their guest-friendships. The so-called πρόξενοι, hospitēs, performed a duty somewhat similar to that of our modern consuls; but this difference is to be noted: the American consul at Liverpool e.g. is an American citizen who takes up his residence there when appointed; the Spartan representative at Athens was an Athenian. He, however, was expected to help and befriend any Lacedaemonian who came to Athens. See on hospitium, p. 16, l. 11.

13. suā sponte: i.e. not sent officially; cf. the same words in p. 22, l. 5.

15. Post, etc.: in full this would be post, neque ita multō post, later, but not very much later; multō, abl. expressing degree of difference.

18. in oppidō Citiō: he died during the siege of Citium.

18. est mortuus: his death was concealed from the soldiers for a time, as he had requested; a great victory which they won, both by land and sea, at Salamis in Cyprus, ended the war between Athens and Persia; and in consequence of this victory it is said that no Persian war vessel dared for thirty years to appear in the Aegean sea.

20. dēsīderāvērunt: cf. the meaning of dēsīderium in l. 9, which implies both longing for him and grief at his loss.

20. līberālitāte: in translating bring in ut directly after this word.

22. in iīs: not dependent on imposuerit, which would require the dat., but expressing the place strongly.

22. imposuerit: for the tense in the result clause see G. 287, c; H. 495, VI. See on prōflīgārint, p. 6, l. 11.

23. grātiā: for the purpose of; like causā following its genitive.

24. quisque: not needed after quis. Nepos writes the word as if there had preceded ut omnibus licēret fruī having the same meaning.

25. ut sī quis . . . daret: in order that if any one needed his help he might have something to give on the spot.

Page 29. 1. opis: for the genitive after verbs of want, see G. 223; H. 410, V. 1.

2. differendō: the English defer, etymologically the same word as this, will suggest a translation.

2. cum: whenever; cum, in a repeated action, is followed in Nepos often by the subjunctive, in other writers regularly by the indicative.

3. offēnsum fōrtuītō: whom he had chanced to meet, lit. stumbled upon by accident.

4. suum: emphatic.

4. amiculum: see group IAC-; the garb of the Greeks and Romans consisted of two pieces — the tunic and an over-garment. The latter, called the himation, is meant here. It was of a square or rectangular shape, differing from the corresponding Roman piece, which was oval or round.

5. invocātōs = nōn vocātōs; vocāre frequently has the meaning 'to invite to a feast.'

6. omnēs: an exaggeration derived from the fact that he used to invite those of his own deme Lakiadae who were detained by business in the city past the dining hour.

6. dēvocāret: i.e., dē forō ad cēnam.

7. fidēs: trans. as in the phrase in fidem recipere, p. 16, l. 16.

9. unde: i.e. ut inde.

10. extulit: just as we often in English speak of a person as doing that which he causes to be done.

10. sē gerendō: evidently Nepos meant to continue with a principal verb of which Cimon would be the subject, but changed the form into est mīrandum.

11. sī: after mīror, sī is often best translated that.

11. sēcūra: this of course applies to Cimon himself, acerba to his friends.

ALCIBIADES.

SYNOPSIS. — Alcibiades' faults and virtues; his education; his wealth (1 and 2). After being chosen leader against the Syracusans, he becomes suspected by his citizens (3). After starting for Sicily, he is accused of impiety and ordered to return home; he avoids trial; condemned to death, he zealously assists the Lacedaemonians against his native country (4). To avoid Lacedaemonian treachery, he goes over to the Persians; having become reconciled with his fellow-citizens he inflicts great injuries upon the Lacedaemonians (5). Returning to the city, he receives a most hearty welcome (6). The fleet meets with defeat, and once more Alcibiades becomes unpopular (7). He vainly offers advice to the Athenian generals just before the battle of Aegospotami (8). He goes into the interior of Thrace, then to the satrap Pharnabazus (9). He is slain at the instigation of the Athenian tyrants (10). His skillful adaptation of himself to every form of life (11).

FIG. 10. — ALCIBIADES.

CHRONOLOGY. — 450: Birth of Alcibiades. 415–413: Sicilian war. 415–412: Alcibiades in exile; assists the Lacedaemonians. 412–408: Goes over to Asia; is received by the Athenian fleet, and conquers the Lacedaemonians repeatedly. He enters Athens in triumph. 407–404: Again banished, he goes first to Thrace, then to Pharnabazus, in whose satrapy he is murdered.

Page 30. 1. Alcibiadēs . . . Athēniēnsis: Title set first by itself as in Themistocles; see p. 9, l. 1.

2. nātūra: nominative; more properly it would stand in the main clause as subject of vidētur and be understood in the indirect question (quid . . . possit).

2. experta: for experta esse.

3. memoriae prōdidērunt: a frequent phrase, lit. have handed over to memory, often best rendered freely, have written.

4. nihil: for nēminem but with more force; it seems necessary to make a personal translation, however: nihil . . . virtūtibus: that there never has been a person more conspicuous than he was alike for his faults and for his virtues.

4. excellentius: during the Samnite wars the Delphic oracle told the Romans to set up in some frequented place, statues of the boldest and wisest of the Greeks. They set up in a corner of the Comitium (part of the Forum) statues of Alcibiades and Pythagoras.

5. amplissima: most important; during the interval between the Persian wars and the Peloponnesian war — a period in which falls the youth of Alcibiades — Athens was the most prominent and powerful state of Greece.

5. summō genere: abl. of source; he was related on his mother's side to the Alcmaeonidae, one of the most celebrated Athenian families.

6. omnium: join with fōrmōsissimus; why gen.?

6. ad omnēs rēs aptus cōnsilīque plēnus: ready and capable in every way; cōnsilī plēnus, lit. full of ability, seems best taken as parallel with the adjective aptus, which it strengthens; the following parenthesis, running from namque through resistere, gives instances of his ability and versatility in two very different directions — as a general by land and sea, and as an orator.

8. in prīmis dīcendō valēret: as an orator stood among the foremost, lit. was strong in speaking among the foremost; i.e., his manner of speaking pleased men aside from his arguments.

9. quod: since.

9. commendātiō ōris atque ōrātiōnis: lit. persuasiveness of voice and manner, perhaps better rendered: he so captivated by his, etc.

11. cum: as often as; see on cum vidēret, p. 29, l. 2; vītā quam victū: see group VIV-, VIG-; vītā is the more comprehensive word; his general conduct in life, and includes victus, which has to do only with dress, food, residence, etc.; temporibus callidissimē serviēns: probably not meant as a bad quality, for the enumeration of these begins with lūxuriōsus; hence not time-server, which is a natural translation but carries a wrong implication; one who skilfully adapts himself to circumstances or turns them to account. Plutarch alluding to this characteristic of Alcibiades compares him to a chameleon.

13. īdem: on the other hand, clearly in opposition here, so not to be translated likewise; cf. eundem, p. 41, l. 3.

14. neque causa suberat quārē: and there was no reason why.

15. animī labōrem: trans. the genitive by an adjective.

16. admīrārentur: not to be trans. by 'admired.'

19. in domō: i.e., in the family of Pericles.

19. Periclī: heteroclite (2d declension) genitive in i for the regular is (3d declens.), (G. 43a; H. 68 and 1). Cf. Neoclī, p. 9, l. 1. Pericles was at this time the most important man at Athens, which under him reached its highest point of power. He was the guardian, not step-father of Alcibiades; still they were related, as the grandfather of Alcibiades and the mother of Pericles were brother and sister.

20. Sōcrate: the most celebrated of Greek philosophers; his most distinguished pupils were Plato, Xenophon, and Alcibiades, of whom Alcibiades alone fell away from his influence.

Page 31. 2. ut . . . posset: a result clause summing up all the advantages described since 1, 1, as conferred upon Alcibiades for the most part by nature (chap. 1), or by fortune (chap. 2).

2. fingere: supply bona as its object.

2. vellet: trans. as if pluperfect (G. 308a; H. 510, n. 2); posset also.

4. tribueret: bestowed upon him; the subjunct. is not due to the condition but is attracted to the other subjunctives posset and vellet (G. 342; H. 529, II.).

5. cōnsiliō atque auctōritāte: abl. of cause; (led) by his suggestion and influence.

6. Syrācūsānīs: originally the Athenians simply sought to defend the city of Egesta in the west of Sicily from its neighbor Selinus; the latter appealed to Syracuse for help, the former to Athens. A war between Syracuse and Athens followed.

8. datī: supply sunt.

8. Lamachus: both Nicias and Lamachus lost their lives in Sicily; Lamachus fell in battle, Nicias was put to death by the

FIG. 13.

HERMAE.

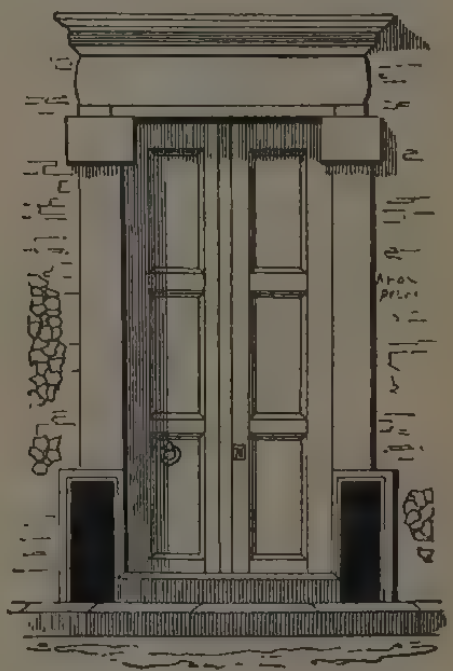

FIG. 14. — IANUA.

Syracusans who captured him after his siege of Syracuse failed.

10. hermae: these were four-cornered posts of wood or stone set up in the streets at the entrance of houses. They were surmounted by a head (usually a double one) of Mercury (Hermes), the god of intercourse, patron of travellers, etc. See Figs. 11, 12, 13. Fig. 14 shows a iānua.

11. Andocidī: genitive, see above p. 30, l. 19 (Periclī). This Andocides was an Athenian orator and statesman; an oration of his Dē Mystēriīs is still extant; in it he tells about the mutilation of the hermae.

12. Itaque . . . vocitātus est: this was chiefly because it and Andocides played leading parts in a suit-at-law in reference to this mutilation. He did not erect it himself, but one of the ten Attic tribes had done so. The Athenians banished Andocides, believing he was connected with the outrage.

13. hōc: subject accus. of esse factum.

13. appārēret: the remainder of the clause is subject of this verb.

14. quae . . . pertinēret: having to do with a matter not of private but of public concern; the subjunctive shows it to be given as the thought of the people. Pericles established a complete democracy, and there were clubs formed at once which constantly labored for its overthrow.

16. multitūdinī: populace.

16. qua: some; the indefinite nom. sing. fem.

16. repentīna: an adj. with vis; trans. as an adv. with exsisteret

17. quae . . . opprimeret: the readiness of the Athenians to think so, was due to their habitual state of mind; cf. the tense of extimēscēbant, p. 8, l. 11; cf. also Them. 8, 1; Cimon 3, 1.

18. hōc: i.e., the forming of a conspiracy to overthrow the democracy.

18. convenīre in: to be likely of, lit. to come together to.

19. māior: cf. the meaning of māgnus, p. 20, l. 1. The comparative may be translated too powerful, etc., for.

19. prīvātus: cf. nōn vidēbātur posse esse prīvātus, p. 8, l. 13.

20. dēvinxerat: (dēvinciō) supply sibi; had laid under obligations to him.

21. plūrēs etiam: still more, thus often etiam with a comparative.

21. operā forēnsī: assistance in court; the word forēnsī and the fact of pleading in court for another Nepos borrows from Roman affairs. At Rome the law-courts were held in the Forum and advocates were allowed; at Athens the law required each man personally to conduct his own defense.

23. prōdīsset: for prōdīvisset; prō (old form prōd) . . . eō, as below prō (prōd) . . . esse = prōdesse.

Page 32. 1. in eō: in reference to him.

2. obesse . . . et prōdesse: taking up the reason in reverse order, obesse for timōrem and prōdesse for spem.

2. aspergēbātur . . . īnfāmiā: the smirch of evil report touched him, lit. he was besprinkled with evil report.

3. in domō suā: domus is treated as ordinary words in relations of place when it means house as opposed to home.

4. mystēria: i.e., of imitating the Eleusinian mysteries. These were a secret worship of the goddess Demeter, additional to her public worship and attended only by the initiated. Alcibiades seems to have been accused of making sport of these mysteries or profaning them by imitation.

4. dīcēbātur: the English prefers the impersonal construction, the Latin the personal; so trans. here: it was said that he.

4. nefās: see group FA-.

5. idque: i.e., facere mystēria.

6. pertinēre: cf. meaning of pertinēret in § 3.

7. hōc crīmine: i.e., his caricaturing of the Eleusinian mysteries.

7. compellābātur: he was called to account. This was in the last ἐκκλησία prior to the setting out of the Sicilian expedition.

9. neque īgnōrāns: and since he was well aware of; the negative before a word already negative gives a strong affirmation.

9. cōnsuētūdinem: how mistrustful the Athenians were of their distinguished men we see from the case of Miltiades (cf. Milt. 8, 1), of Themistocles (cf. Them. 8, 1), of Cimon (cf. Cim. 3).

11. dē praesente: sc. sē governed by dē.

11. (ut) quaestiō habērētur: that an investigation be made; ut is often omitted after postulābat, cf. p. 1, l. 19: idque Lemniī . . . facerent postulāsset (G. 331 f. R.; H. 499, 2).

11. quam: than (that).

12. invidiae crīmine: a charge which hatred had devised, a subjective genitive, lit. a charge of hatred.

13. quiēscendum: sc. esse; impersonal with dat. of agent sibi to be supplied; it depends on dēcrēvērunt.

13. in praesentī = in praesentiā, p. 8, l. 6.

13. nocērī eī nōn posse: he could not be injured, lit. it could not be injured to him, intransitive verb (noceō) used in passive impersonally.

14. exspectandum: see note on quiēscendum above.

15. quō . . . exīsset: (exeō), when he should be away.

16. itaque: separate into and so in trans.

17. quod sacra violāsset (violāvisset): these words give the substance of the charge against Alcibiades; the subjunctive places it on the authority of the accusers (G. 321; H. 516, II.).

18. reum: i.e., no formal charge was brought till he had gone; the talk against him in the assembly just before his departure was not a legal accusation. Reus means one having to do with a rēs which, technically, was an action at law; then it was limited to defendant.

18. cum: begin trans. with when (cf. p. 1, l. 1); supply cum, but in the sense of although before essetque.

18. nūntius: message, explained by the purpose clause ut . . . redīret.

19. ad causam dīcendam: see on operā forēnsī, p. 31, l. 21; a man must plead his own case at Athens; causam dīcere is a constant expression for defense before a court.

21. prōvinciae bene administrandae: of performing successfully the task (assigned him); notice that prōvincia has not its usual meaning here.

21. nōn pārēre: to disobey.

22. trirēmem: the Salaminian, one of the two state triremes was sent out.

22. erat: with mīssa.

23. Thūriōs in Ītaliam: the Latin allows two expressions of limit of motion where the English admits but one. We say 'to Thurii in Italy,' instead of 'to Thurii into Italy'; note that the country has the preposition, while the town in precisely the same construction omits it. (G. 258 and b; H. 380, I. and II.). Thurii was an Athenian colony in lower Italy.

24. multa sēcum reputāns: lit. thinking over many things with himself, trans. calling up in his mind many instances (of), etc.; this gives the reason for the following decision.

24. immoderātā . . . licentiā: excessive arbitrariness. Instances in which the people carried away by their whims had condemned men of rank, led him not to return as he had intended at first.

25. ergā: generally used of friendly feeling.

Page 33. 1. ratus: trans. by a finite verb to avoid a succession of participles and insert and before trans. subdūxit.

3. dein: occasionally in Nepos for deinde; cf. p. 5, l. 25.

3. capitis: the gen. with a verb of condemning showing the penalty (G. 220a; H. 410, III. n. 2). Cf. p. 8, l. 2, capitis absolūtus.

4. bonīs pūblicātīs: with confiscation of his property, an abl. absolute expressing an attendant circumstance; the participle is perfect, but the time is the same as that of damnātum (esse).

4. et: this connects damnātum (esse) and coāctōs (esse).

4. id quod ūsū vēnerat: as had actually been done, lit. come to use, ūsū: an older form of ūsuī. Nepos implies by this clause that it was most unusual to have this curse added to the other punishments.

5. Eumolpidās: a family of priests at Athens, in whose charge was the proper observance of the Eleusinian mysteries; these were said to have been instituted by their progenitor Eumolpus.

5. coāctos: from cōgō.

6. sē: him, i.e., Alcibiades, the subject of audīvit.

6. quō = ut eō, a purpose clause.

6. quō . . . memoria: that the record (of the curse) might be better attested.

7. exemplum: copy.

7. esse: take with positum.

9. cōnsuērat = cōnsuēverat (consuēscō).

10. inimīcōs: personal enemies as opposed to hostēs, public enemies; this passage almost defines the distinction between the words.

10. quod . . . essent: cf. quod . . . redīsset, p. 23, l. 12; also p. 32, l. 17, above, violāsset.

11. sē: i.e., Alcibiades.

12. ēiēcisse: subject and object omitted, (they) had driven (him) out.

13. pāruisse: had been guided by, lit. had obeyed.

14. Persē rēge: see on the same words p. 16, l. 4. This alliance (412) followed a year after the fortifying of Decelea (413).

16. in obsidiōne: the Athenians could get no supplies by land, and were kept in a state of constant uneasiness.

17. Ēiusdem operā: through him.

18. Quō factō: in consequence of this (lit. abl. abs.).

20. Neque: do not begin with "neither" or "nor"; neque = et nōn, of which it is best to omit et and put nōn with the verb. It is customary in Latin to connect sentences by conjunctions, so we often find neque enim for nōn enim; neque vērō for nōn vērō; neque igitur for nōn igitur.

21. ācerrimī: (this) most shrewd.

24. aliquandō: this is more emphatic than quandō after nē; at some time or other.

25. interficiendī: the Spartans commanded Astyochus to kill him, but he is thought to have warned Alcibiades.

26. id: accus. of the thing, retained with the passive of a verb of concealing; id cēlārī, to be kept ignorant of this (G. 239 c, Rem.; H. 374, 2, n. 1 [2]).

26. diūtius: a strong positive in force, very long. Cf. liberius, p. 9, l. 7.

Page 34. 1. eā sagācitāte: an abl. of quality may often be well rendered by an adjective.

3. Tissaphernem: the Persian satrap in Lydia and Caria from 420–395 B.C.

4. Dārēī: not the ruler called the "Great," but Darius Nothus, the father of Cyrus the younger.

5. Athēniēnsium: join with opēs.

6. senēscere: do not trans. literally, but choose a word giving a contrast with crēscere.

6. Lacedaemoniōrum: those of the L., i.e., opēs.

7. Pīsandrō: one of the leaders of the oligarchical faction in the Athenian army; Alcibiades turned to him because Androcles, the leader of the popular faction, was his personal foe.

7. praetōre: see on p. 5, l. 8.

10. Erat: notice that there is a change of subject.

10. eōdem: join with sēnsū, an abl. of quality.

10. quō: as, an abl. of quality.

11. optimātium: (from optimus) these were the most prominent and wealthy citizens, the aristocratical party of the state as opposed to the populārēs, the party of the people.

12. per: through the mediation of.

13. ab exercitū: the army in Samos defying the oligarchy established at Athens, constituted itself a δῆμος or popular assembly and voted to recall Alcibiades. At Athens when the 5000 replaced the 400, Critias, seconded by Theramenes, accomplished this same thing.

15. parī imperiō: abl. expressing either quality or manner.

15. praeficitur: is put in command.

15. simul: together with, not at the same time with.

16. Thērāmene: he was second in prominence only to Alcibiades at Athens at this time. Afterwards he strove unsuccessfully to mediate between the extreme parties and was put to death at the instigation of Critias.

16. in: during.

20. nāvālibus: the most brilliant were the two naval victories of Alcibiades at Abydus on the Hellespont (411) and at Cyzicus on the Propontis (410).

23. Hellēspontum: see on the same word p. 21, l. 2.

24. expūgnārant = expūgnāverant.

26. cōnsiliō: prudent conduct; diplomacy.

27. praedā onustī: they had received this from cities previously in revolt from Athens.

Page 35. 3. Hīs: dat. with the phrase obviam dēscendisset (G. 228 b; H. 392, 2).

3. obviam: (G. 148, note θ; H. 304, I. 2).

3. ūniversa: see group VERT-.

3. cīvitās: body of citizens.

3. Pīraeum: the port of Athens; see on triplex Pīraeī portus, p. 13, l. 16.

4. exspectātiō: eagerness.

4. vīsendī Alcibiadis: the objective gerundive construction (G. 298; H. 544, I.).

6. proinde āc sī: just as if. In reality this enthusiasm was not shown until later when Alcibiades appeared before the Senate and Assembly. Cf. Grote, Part II, chap. lxiv.

6. Sīc enim populō erat persuāsum: For the people were convinced of this; viz., that which follows in the clause et . . . operā. The intransitive verb persuādeō used impersonally in the passive with the dative of the active retained (G. 230; 225e; H. 384, 5).

8. Siciliam āmīssam: the loss of Sicily, lit. Sicily lost; the perfect participle is to be translated as a noun, just as in the phrase ante urbem conditam, before the founding of the city (G. 292a; H. 549, N. 2). They did not lose Sicily, but were forced to give up their hope of bringing it under Athenian sway.

9. suae: emphatic = suae ipsōrum.

10. expulissent: they brought the charge on themselves as the subjunctive shows; cf. quod . . . redīsset, p. 23, l. 12.

17. ūsū: for ūsuī; see on id quod, etc., p. 33, l. 4.

18. Olympiae vīctōribus: i.e., when welcomed back home. In Olympia itself their reward was a crown of olive, at Delphi crowns of bay were conferred. Other victorious generals had received similar honors.

FIG. 15. — HEAD SHOWING CORONA AND TAENIA.

18. taeniīs: these were simply to ornament the corōnae. See Fig. 15.

21. acerbitātem: join with reminiscēns and see G. 219; H. 407.

21. astū: this is used of Athens exclusive of the acropolis and port.

22. fuerit: for tense see on prōflīgārint, p. 6, l. 11. In the same way inlacrimārit (-māverit) and ostenderit. These last are result clauses introduced by quīn (= ut nōn, G. 319d; H. 504, 2) depending on a result clause ut . . . fuerit, which itself depends on fēcit.

24. operā: instigation.

26. sacrilegī: cf. quod sacra violāsset, 4, 3, and the meaning of sacra there; see group SAC-.

1. Eumolpidae: see on Eumolpidās, p. 33, l. 5.

2. resacrāre: re- has not the force of again in the present instance, but of back; i.e., they removed by a similar ceremonial the curse previously imposed by them.

5. Alcibiadī: genitive; see above Periclī, p. 30, l. 19.

5. nimis: do not trans. too.

7. domī: i.e., he was most influential, but not in an official capacity except with the fleet.

7. trādita: put into his hands.

8. sibi: i.e., Alcibiades.

8. conlēgae: Xenophon tells us that Thrasybulus and Adimantus were made generals on land.

10. quod: two reasons chiefly led to his removal: the defeat of his lieutenant at Notium by Lysander during the absence of Alcibiades, and his own repulse before Cyme when endeavoring unjustly to plunder it.

11. ex sententiā: to their (the Athenians') satisfaction.

12. Nihil . . . nōn: an emphatic affirmative, everything without exception.

13. Ex quō fīēbat: The result of this was; see on p. 5, l. 22, quō factum est ut.

14. eum: this is out of place; properly it would be before aut or after malitiōsē.

15. malitiōsē: treacherously.

16. rēge: i.e., king of Persia.

17. putāmus: as writers often make use of the editorial "we."

18. malō: the dat. of purpose, with huic the dat. of the person affected (G. 233 a; H. 390, I.).

18. nimiam: exaggerated.

18. opīniōnem ingenī: i.e., the estimate put upon his ability by others, not his own; an objective genitive.

19. nē . . . concupīsceret: properly a clause following the verb of fearing timēbātur; it does not join on well; a clause repeating the idea of timēbātur is best introduced after dīligebātur, e.g., since they were apprehensive lest (G. 331, f. and note; H. 498, III. and note 1).

20. tyrannidem: cf. p. 8, l. 19 ff. for the Greek idea of a "tyranny."

21. Quibus rēbus factum est ut: almost = ex quō fīēbat ut, above l. 13.

22. absentī: sc. eī (G. 229); the dat. can be explained by G. 235 a; H. 385, II. 2.

22. alium: ten generals, with Conon at their head, were appointed.

24. Pactyēn: an accus. of the Greek first declens. from Pactyē.

26. prīmus Graecae cīvītātis: first from a Greek state. This can only be true of the interior, as the Greeks had long had colonies on the coast; but see Milt. 2, 1.

Page 37. 1. glōriōsius: an adjective in the neuter agreeing with locuplētārī.

2. locuplētārī: trans. reflexively, to enrich himself; it is subject accus. of esse to be supplied.

2. Quā ex rē = ex quō, p. 36, l. 13.

2. crēverat (from crēscō): i.e., before the events of the next chapter occurred. So pepererat (pariō) below.

5. Neque tamen: see on neque vērō, p. 23, l. 20.

5. patriae: objective genitive.

6. praetor: see on praetōrēs, p. 5, l. 8; as a matter of fact Philocles was "general," with others including Conon, but Lysander was "admiral."

7. cōnstituisset: this and abesset follow cum temporal; the concluding part of the sentence begins with Alcibiadēs ad in l. 12.

9. in eō: explained by the following purpose clause ut . . . dūceret.

9. ut bellum quam diūtissimē dūceret: to prolong the war to the utmost; quam with superlative indicating the highest possible degree (usually trans. as possible). Cf. quam īnfīrmissimōs, p. 14, l. 4 (G. 93 b; H. 170, 2 [2]).

10. ipsīs: an emphatic to them, i.e., Lysander and his countrymen.

10. pecūnia: the Spartans were given at first half a talent a month for each vessel, later two-thirds, to pay their crews.

11. Athēniēnsibus exhaustīs: not an abl. abs. but dative depending on erat super = supererat (G. 228; H. 386).

13. volgō: he made his proposition in the presence of the rank and file (volgō) in order to win them over. His success seems clear from the statement about Philocles in l. 21 ff. sentiēbat sē . . . futūrum.

13. agere: negotiate (i.e., with the commanders, of whom there were several); he suggested that they go to Sestus, where, with supplies plenty and harbor secure, they could offer or decline battle. Nepos also represents that he offered to attack the Spartans with a Thracian force and compel them either to abandon their ships to hold their position on land, or to take to their ships and engage in a sea-fight. But it seems unlikely that he would have offered to attack with a body of Thracians Lysander, who was on the opposite side of the Hellespont. Consult Grote, Part II, chap. lxv.

14. sī vellent: i.e., they must grant him something, probably (as § 4 shows) restoration to the army. It is a subordinate clause in indirect discourse representing si voltis in his words.

14. coāctūrum: (esse) from cōgo; it is the principal clause in ind. disc. dependent on spopondit.

15. spopondit: he answered for it.

16. eō: on this account, explained by quod valērent.

16. nōlle: principal verb in ind. disc. dependent on a verb of saying implied in spopondit.

17. sibi: refers to the same person as sē before coāctūrum.

17. esse: see on nōlle above; parallel with these are cōnflictūrum (esse) and compositūrum (esse) below.

18. Seuthem: king of the Thracian tribe Odrysae.

18. eum: i.e., Lysander.

18. terrā: abl. of separation.

19. quō factō . . . cōnflīctūrum, etc.: cf. p. 4, l. 4, quō exstinctō . . . poenās datūrōs. Supply eum (i.e., Lȳsandrum) as subject of cōnflīctūrum and compositūrum.

20. bellum compositūrum = pācem factūrum.

22. Alcibiade receptō: abl. abs. serving as a condition; if Alcibiades were restored, with its conclusion in futūrum.

23. nūllīus mōmentī . . . futūrum: would have no influence, lit. would be of no weight; a gen. of quality (G. 215; H. 396 V.).

23. sī quid secundī: whatever success, lit. if anything of good fortune; so below sī quid adversī. Secundī and adversī are partitive genitives, from the neuter of adjectives used substantively.

24. nūllam . . . fore: i.e., in the eyes of the soldiers.

25. fore = futūram esse.

25. contrā ea: on the other hand, lit. against these things; used frequently by Nepos in place of the adverb contrā.

25. accidisset: representing acciderit of the direct discourse, so ēvēnisset just above stands for ēvēnerit (G. 337, 3 [3d exam.]; H. 525, II.).

25. sē ūnum . . . reum: he alone would be held responsible, lit. he alone would be a defendant of this crime. Ill-success in a general was held to be a crime and ground for an accusation. The responsibility of Philocles would lie in having empowered Alcibiades to force Lysander into an engagement.

Page 38. 3. castra . . . nautica: these were fortified places on shore serving to protect the vessels. Lysander was safely anchored in the harbor of Lampsacus; the Athenians lying off the shore unprotected. Hence Alcibiades advised them to go to Sestus.

4. immodestiā: insubordination.

4. nē . . . dētur: a clause following perīculum est, which is equivalent to a verb of fearing (G. 331 f.; H. 498, III.).

6. exercitūs: genitive in gerundive construction depending on occāsiō (G. 298; H. 544, I.).

7. volgum: as in p. 37, l. 13, the common soldiers.

8. praedātum: supine; cf. dēlīberātum, p. 1, l. 10 (G. 302; H. 546).

9. tempus reī gerendae nōn dīmīsit: did not let slip the time for action.

10. eō impetū: with this blow.

10. dēlēvit: do not trans. destroyed.

12. eadem: the part of Thrace where he had been living.

12. arbitrāns: deponent verbs have the active participles as well as the passive; trans. by a clause with since.

12. Thrāciam: he went to Bithynia in Asia just beyond the Propontis; the inhabitants of this country were allied to and often called Thracians. These robbed him and he went to Pharnabazus.

13. abdidit: see the group DA-, put.

14. fōrtūnam: put for himself and all that concerned him.

17. abstulērunt: from auferō, ab + ferō.

18. tūtum: sc. esse.

19. Pharnabazum: the Persian satrap or governor of Phrygia on the Hellespont during the eventful period 413–394 B.C.

20. suā cēpit hūmānitāte: won by his personal attractiveness.

21. eum: i.e., Alcibiades; the accusative follows antecēderet, which Nepos does not use with the dative (G. 228 a [with footnote 1]; H. 386, 4 [with footnote]).

21. in amīcitiā: i.e., of Pharnabazus.

22. castrum: usually castellum.

23. quīnquāgēna: show the distributive force in translating.

23. vēctīgālis: gen.

24. quā fōrtūnā: abl. with contentus (G. 254 b; H. 421, III.), but with this state of things; cf. cūius generis, p. 1, l. 7.

25. Athēnās . . . servīre: an accus. and inf. dependent on patī, which is a complementary inf. depending on poterat.

26. omnī ferēbātur cōgitātiōne: all his thought was directed, lit. he was borne by all thought.

Page 39. 1. rēge Persē: Artaxerxes Mnemon, son of Darius II (Nothus), had just ascended the throne.

3. neque dubitābat: with accus. and inf. as usual in Nepos; see on nōn dubitāns, p. 4, l. 9.

4. potestātem: not power.

4. Cȳrum: the younger; well-known to readers of Xenophon's Anabasis. It was for the expedition described by Xenophon that Cyrus was now preparing.

6. māgnam sē initūrum grātiam: would win great favor for himself, lit. he would enter into, etc.

8. hōc: this meeting with the king.

8. mōlīrētur: was laboring to bring about.

8. ut . . . mitterētur: trans. actively by an English infin. with "him" for object.

9. cēterīque tyrannī: these were the thirty tyrants so-called, placed over Athens by Lysander and the Spartans after the capture of the city at the end of the Peloponnesian war. By some it is thought that not the "thirty" but Agis, king of Sparta, and Cyrus the Persian were chiefly instrumental in bringing about the death of Alcibiades.

10. certōs: not = quōsdam.

11. mīserant: notice the tense.

11. quī (= ut iī) eum certiōrem facerent: to inform him, a phrase of saying, hence followed by the ind. disc. with the principal clause nihil fore (futūrum esse) ratum.

13. cōnstituisset: representing cōnstituistī of the message sent Lysander.

14. suās rēs gestās manēre: what he had done to endure, lit. his things done to remain.

14. persequerētur: a principal clause in ind. disc., but put in the subjunctive as it represents an imperative in the message persequere (G. 339; H. 523, III.).

15. Lacō: i.e., Lysander, the Lacedaemonian.

15. accūrātius sibi agendum: sc. esse; impersonal construction, lit. it must be acted by him more strictly, etc., freely, he must have a more definite understanding, etc.

17. renūntiat: re- has a negative force in this compound and the word combines the two ideas of sending word and declaring at an end; he sent word (to P.) that he would break off, etc. renūntiat includes in itself the conclusion of the condition nisi . . . trādidisset as if we had dīxit sē renūntiātūrum quae . . . essent, nisi trādidisset; see G. 341 c. (3d ex.).

17. quae . . . essent: subord. clause in ind. disc. for sunt; this is the league referred to p. 33, l. 14 ff.

18. sibi: i.e., Lysander.

18. trādidisset: in secondary sequence because renūntiat is an historical present (G. 276 d; H. 467, III.), therefore practically a secondary tense (G. 287 e; H. 495, II.).

19. nōn tulit hunc: yielded to his urging, lit. did not endure him, which, in another connection, might mean just the opposite, viz., did not submit to his dictation.

19. violāre: see group under VIS-.

19. clēmentiam: obligations of humanity.

21. ille: i.e., Alcibiades.

22. in Phrygiā: Alcibiades was in a little village called Melissa.

23. mīssī: i.e., Susamithres and Bagaeus.

23. vīcīnitātī: put for the inhabitants of the neighborhood; join with negōtium dant.

24. illī: i.e., the neighbors.

FIG. 16. GLADIUS.

Page 40. 1. succendērunt: see group CAND-.

4. etsī: i.e., in spite of this he found something with which to defend himself; we should expect since they . . . he.

4. eī: dat. of separation with persons; cf. absentī, p. 36, l. 22 (G. 229; H. 385, 2). One form of the gladius appears in Fig. 16.

5. subālāre tēlum: tēlum can be used of any offensive weapon; the meaning here is a dagger small enough to be concealed under the arm; similarly we indicate a small size in the word pocket-knife. As the over garment concealed the entire left arm, even a sword might easily be hidden there.

5. ēripuit: i.e., from its sheath.

7. in praesentiā: as in p. 8, l. 6.

8. fuit: for adfuit.

8. vestīmentōrum: join with quod, a partitive gen.

8. hīs . . . coniectīs: i.e., to lessen the flame for an instant.

10. ēminus: belongs to the same group as manus, hand. See group MA-.

13. contēctum: with cremāvit as abreptōs mīsērunt, p. 4, l. 24.

14. quod: which.

15. sīc: this was in 404 B.C., when Alcibiades must have been upwards of 45 years old.

17. īnfāmātum: see group FA-.

17. gravissimī: i.e., whose words carry weight, authority; trans. most trustworthy.

18. summīs laudibus extulērunt: this is true only of his abilities; these writers do not overlook his dissipation, excesses, and reckless ambition.

19. aetātis: predicate gen. (G. 214 c; H. 402).

19. fuit: belonged to; cf. p. 17, l. 9, ēiusdem cīvitātis fuit.

19. post aliquantō: post is an adverb in these expressions and the abl. expresses measure of difference, as post has comparative force; see on post multō, p. 22, l. 5.

20. quī quidem duo: takes up together two, Theopompus and Timaeus, who (connected by et in the text) are opposed to Thucydides the contemporary of Alcibiades. The two others lived in the time of Alexander the Great.

20. maledicentissimī: trans. by a clause with although, and add elsewhere.

21. nēsciō quō modō: strange to say, lit. I do not know in what way; see G. 202 a; 334 e; H. 191, N. As nēsciō quō is practically an indefinite pronoun, it has no influence on the construction.

22. suprā: i.e., in chapters 1 and 2.

22. praedicārunt: for praedicāvērunt, the subjects being Theopompus and Timaeus.

23. hōc: accus. referring to what follows.

23. cum: although.

25. superāsse: for superāvisse; sc. eum for subject of this and also of the infinitives īnservisse, sē dedisse, vēnisse, imitātum (esse), effēcisse, which are all principal clauses in ind. disc. depending on praedicārunt.

26. vēnerit: subjunct. in a subord. clause in ind. disc.; the idiom which requires the perfect indic. after postquam in direct disc. seems to have affected the tense here (G. 324, 287 c. note; H. 471, 4).

26. studiīs eōrum: the favorite occupations of these men, i.e., Thēbānōrum implied in Thēbās.

Page 41. 3. eundem: practically an adv. (G. 195 e; H. 451, 3); cf. p. 30, l. 13.

FIG. 17. — ALCIBIADES AS A YOUTH.

5. patientiā: endurance was the object of the Spartan training of boys. To test this they were severely lashed once a year before the altar of Artemis, and it was held disgraceful to utter the least sound of pain.

5. parsimōniā vīctūs, etc.: in simplicity of food and living; see on cultum, p. 22, l. 8.

8. fortiter vēnārī, lūxuriōsē vīvere: the omission of the conjunction (called asyndeton) makes each phrase more emphatic.

10. Quibus rēbus effēcisse: still the main clause of quotation.

11. prīnceps: i.e., prīmus omnium.

12. reliquōs ōrdiāmur: let us take up the remaining lives, lit. begin the remaining (men).

EPAMINONDAS.

SYNOPSIS. — The difference between the Greeks and the Romans in their estimate of certain matters (1). The birth and training of Epaminondas (2). His ability and his character (3). A proof of his self-denial (4). Instances of his eloquence and readiness in reply (5, 6). His patient endurance of wrongs; his strict adherence to his idea of duty, despite the ingratitude of his fellow-citizens (7, 8). His death (9). His celibacy; disinclination to shed Theban blood; services to the Theban state (10).

CHRONOLOGY. — 418: Birth of Epaminondas. 379–76: The Thebans drive the Lacedaemonians from their citadel and for several years wage war against them. 371: Epaminondas goes to Sparta as a Theban embassador; he defeats the Lacedaemonians at Leuctra. 370 f.: He leads an army into Peloponnesus, frees Arcadia, restores Messenia, blockades Sparta; returning home he is tried for his life. 368 f.: He saves a Theban army in Thessaly; he releases Pelopidas. 362: He marches for the fourth time into Peloponnesus and falls at Mantinea.

2. praecipienda: sc. nōbīs, dat. of agent; lēctōribus is the ind. object.

3. ad suōs referant: judge by comparison with their own, properly hold (carry) to their own as to a measure.

4. nēve = et nē.

4. ipsīs: i.e., as they look at the matter (G. 235; H. 384, 4).

4. leviōra: quite trivial (G. 93 a; H. 444, 1). Cf. līberius, p. 9, l. 7.

5. fuisse: sc. leviōra.

5. enim = exemplī grātiā; introducing an illustration.

5. mūsicēn: a Greek word, hence the ending; it usually included a wide range of knowledge among the ancients, but Nepos seems to use it here nearly in the sense of our music.

6. abesse: be away from, i.e., be inconsistent with.

6. prīncipis: a man in high station; cf. prīncipēs, p. 16, l. 8. The Roman historian Tacitus comments severely on the fact that the Emperor Nero played and sang in public.

6. persōnā: trace etymologically the very interesting history of this word.

6. saltāre: an inf. but used as a noun parallel in construction to mūsicēn and subject accus. of pōnī.

7. vērō: while, introducing something much more emphatic.

7. etiam in vitiīs pōnī: is reckoned actually among vices. Cf. with this Cic. prō Mūrēnā 13: nēmō ferē saltat sōbrius, nisi forte īnsānit.

9. exprimere imāginem: to draw an exact sketch, lit. to stamp out a likeness.

9. cōnsuētūdinis atque vītae: of his habits and his life; Nepos means by cōnsuētūdinis the principles controlling his actions, and by vītae, what he accomplished.

10. nihil vidēmur dēbēre: we ought not as I think.

11. eam: i.e., imāginem.

12. disciplīnīs: subjects of instruction.

14. sī qua alia: whatever else, lit. if any other things; cf. p. 37, l. 23, sī quid secundī, etc.

14. memoriā: abl. (G. 245 a; H. 421, III).

15. postrēmō: Nepos forgets to give a special description of the exploits of Epaminondas. These are introduced casually in the course of the narrative.

16. antepōnuntur: a general statement, not true of Epaminondas alone; so ēius is not to be supplied.

17. igitur: to resume then; taking up a narrative after a digression.

17. quō: sc. eum nātum esse, upon which the abl. quō depends.

17. honestō: from honōs, and suffix denoting fullness, should never be translated honest.

18. iam: poverty had been characteristic of his ancestors as well.

19. ut nēmō Thēbānus magis: perhaps best taken as a result clause; sc. ērudītus fuerit.

19. nēmō: used adjectively here, though usually a substantive (G. 202 f.; H. 457, 1).

19. citharizāre: the cithara (κιθάρα, κίθαρις) was a musical instrument of from four to seven strings. Tradition gave as its inventor Amphion, ruler of Thebes and son of Zeus. It corresponds to the modern guitar, a name which it gives to us through the Italian. (See Fig. 18.) A small ivory instrument called a plectrum was often used in playing it.

Page 43. 1. minōre . . . glōriā: abl. of quality.

1. mūsicīs: music.

3. cantāre tībiīs: flute-playing; the ancient flute resembled the modern flageolet in having a mouth-piece at the end. Usually there were two of these flutes (notice the plural here, tībiīs), sometimes united at the end in one mouth-piece, always arranged so that, if there were two mouth-pieces, they were close enough to require but one performer. If the pipes were of different lengths one produced the lower or base notes, the other the high or treble. (See Figs. 18–22, of several forms of this instrument.)

FIG. 18. CITHARA.

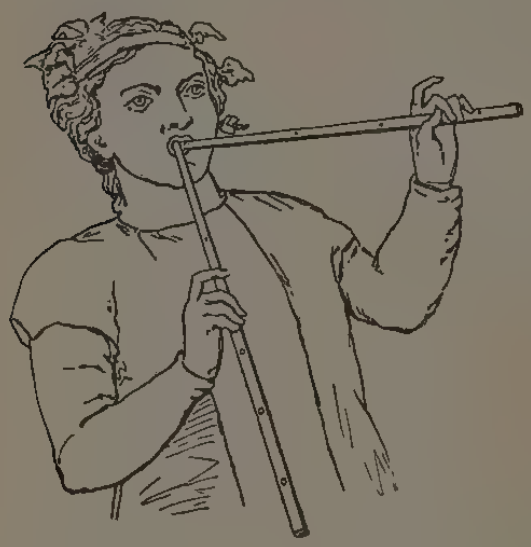

FIG. 22. — TIBIAE.

5. Pythagorēum: a follower of Pythagoras; Pythagoras was a philosopher from Samos who lived about 500 B.C. and resided most of his life in lower Italy. He and his pupils made great advances in the study of mathematics and music.

6. fuit dēditus: cf. for meaning sē dēdidit, p. 9, l. 11.

6. trīstem: gloomy.

7. anteposuerit: cf. prōflīgārint, p. 6, l. 11.

8. in doctrīnīs: in (various) branches of learning.

11. Atque: now.

11. ad: according to.

12. contemnenda: worthy of scorn, an adj. (G. 294 a; H. 543).

13. utique: at least; what was the view taken in his own time Nepos leaves undecided.

13. ephēbus: (ἔφηβος) this name was applied to youths from 16 to 20, or in a narrower sense from 18 to 20; during this period they served a sort of apprenticeship to the trade of arms within the limits of their own country.

14. palaestrae: a place where youths practiced boxing and wrestling. In earlier times it was probably a portion only of a gymnasium; later the Roman writers used the terms gymnasium and palaestra without distinction.

15. servīvit: aimed at; strove for; cf. p. 41, l. 2, firmitātī . . . īnserviunt.

16. ad āthlētārum ūsum . . . ad bellī ūtilitātem: trans. was necessary . . . was helpful, lit. pertained to the need of . . . to the advantage of.

16. āthlētārum: the contestants for prizes at great Greek festivals.

17. exercēbātur: trained himself, reflexively as ērudītus est, p. 18, l. 6.

18. ad eum fīnem quoad: this phrase qualifies luctandō (only), so far that he might gain the ability to grapple with his antagonist without being thrown off his feet, lit. to the end until he should be able standing to grapple and struggle.

19. stāns: in one form of wrestling if one fell, his opponent waited for him to rise unless this happened three times; in the other style the contest was continued on the ground, after the wrestlers had lost their footing, till one of them acknowledged himself defeated.

19. armīs: practice in arms.

21. fīrmitātem: power rather than strength only.

21. etiam: still, with comparative; cf. p. 12, l. 21.

23. gravis: for meaning cf. gravitās, p. 23, l. 18.

23. temporibus: see on temporibus serviēns, p. 30, l. 13.

23. ūtēns: join "constantly" or "always" with this in translating, as the pres. partic. carries with it the idea of habit.

24. fortis manū: personally brave; cf. p. 20, l. 6.

24. animō māximō: an abl. of quality describing him by a permanent characteristic; for meaning of animō, cf. cīvibus animum accessūrum, p. 5, l. 14.

25. Īdem: furthermore.

25. continēns: master of himself.

26. patiēns: forbearing.

26. admīrandum: see on contemnenda, p. 43, l. 12.

Page 44. 1. commīssa: a substantive here, secrets, lit. things committed to one, to one's confidence.

3. discī: impersonal.

4. cum: whenever, with the subjunctive as usual in Nepos in this sense; so below in l. 12 ff., cum aliquis . . . esset captus; cf. cum tempus posceret, p. 30, l. 11.

4. dē rē pūblicā: do not translate about the republic.

5. disputārētur: see group PV-; disputārētur and habērētur are subjunctives in a relative clause of result. Cf. crēderētur, p. 3, l. 16; patēret, p. 8, l. 24.

7. Paupertātem: see group PAV-.

8. dē rē pūblicā: distinguish from the same words above in l. 4.

9. cēperit: see on anteposuerit, p. 43, l. 7.

9. caruit: i.e., he was unwilling to accept these for himself = nōn ūsus est.

10. fidē: connect with amīcōrum in the same way as facultātibus, i.e., he often availed himself of the trust his friends reposed in him to help others.

11. possit: (G. 287 c; H. 495, VI).

13. captus: ransom of prisoners or exchange was speedily accomplished by the Greeks; for slavery was the alternative for the captives. Poor men were usually ransomed by friends and relatives who expected to be reimbursed at the earliest possible moment.

14. conlocārī: to be betrothed; the dowry of a bride was determined at the betrothal, and on its amount her position as a married woman greatly depended.

15. daret: an indirect question (G. 334, b; H. 529, I).

15. prō: in proportion to; sc. cūiusque with facultātibus.

16. cum cōnfēcerat: see on cum in l. 4; the present instance is one of the two exceptions in Nepos.

18. eum: i.e., the amīcī (l. 13), father of the virginis nūbilis.

18. eīque: the order for construing is faciēbat ut ipsī (i.e., his friends in person) numerārent eī (dat. Epam.), etc. This may have been simply for the recipient to show his gratitude, but the action suggests a loan rather than money given.

21. abstinentia: unselfishness.

22. Artaxerxis: Artaxerxes II called Mnemon.

23. corrumpendum: gerundive in agreement with Epamīnōndam, the object of suscēperat; it expresses purpose (G. 294 d; H. 544, N. 2).

25. talentīs: see on p. 8, l. 4.

Page 45. 1. convēnit: went to; cf. conveniundī, p. 39, l. 4.

2. adventūs: gen. limiting causam.

2. ostendit: explained.

2. Diomedonte: abl. governed by the prep. cōram, which sometimes follows its case.

3. Nihil: not at all; an emphatic nōn; an adverbial accus.

3. pecūniā: abl. of separation following opus (G. 243 e, but see also footnote; H. 414, IV).

4. grātiīs: the abl. plural of grātia used adverbially; later contracted into grātīs, which has been adopted into English.

5. sīn autem: autem strengthens the adversative force of sīn.

6. Namque . . . cāritāte: For I will not surrender (accipere, lit. accept) my love for my country in exchange for (prō) the wealth of the world; this causes the object of the verb and the word governed by prō to exchange places, but seems to express the idea naturally.

7. Tū: placed first with scornful emphasis, a man like you.

8. incōgnitum: trans. by a relative clause.

8. tuī: gen. dependent on similem (G. 234 d [2]; H. 391, II. 4 [2]).

9. ēgredere: (ēgredior) pres. imperative pass.; a deponent verb occasions no confusion, but remember that in fully inflected verbs the present infinitive act. and the present imperative pass. (sing.) have exactly the same form.

12. facis: the action is to be immediate (cōnfestim), and is not regarded as future though trādam stands in the apodosis; by rule we should have fēceris, which in English oddly enough we regularly translate by the present. Cf. Cic. Verr. 4, 85: morīēre virgīs (you shall be flogged to death) nisi mihi sīgnum trāditur.

13. tūtō: adv.

13. exīret: we should expect licēret sibi exīre, as below licēret.

14. Istud: this which you ask; this demonstrative pronoun is regularly used in connection with the second person (G. 102 c; H. 450).

14. quidem: certainly.

15. neque tuā causā: nevertheless not on your account.

15. tibi: the dat. of ind. obj. in place of the abl. of separation (G. 229; H. 385, 2).

15. nē . . . aliquis: more emphatic than nē . . . quis (G. 105 d, note; H. 455, 1) and strongly suggesting that by aliquis Diomedon himself is meant.

16. ēreptum: Epaminondas means to imply that if Diomedon should be robbed when going away from Thebes, he would spread the report that Epaminondas himself, having with a show of virtue refused his offer of money, had had him robbed of it.

17. dēlātum: as a present, lit. being offered.

19. Athēnās: accus. expressing limit of motion after sē dēdūcī velle to be supplied.

20. Neque vērō = nōn vērō; see on neque vērō, p. 33, l. 20.

20. id satis habuit: was (not) satisfied with this.

21. ut ēscenderet: i.e., to sail from Athens to Asia; a result clause depending on effēcit.

24. possumus: we might, as if subjunctive.

25. volūmine: it was usual for each book to be written upon a separate roll, but in case of great length more were used, that each roll might not be bulky. Notice the etymology and compare volume in English. (See Fig. 9 after note on vincla epistulae, p. 23, l. 13, showing a case of these rolls.)

Page 46. 1. quōrum: sc. vītam; the Latin rarely puts abstract or semi-abstract nouns in the plural; but we may translate by the English plural.

1. sēparātim: the description of each occupying an entire volūmen.

1. versuum: note etymology; see group VERT-. As the books were written on sheets fastened together in long strips and rolled, the ancients used to number roll (volūmen) and line (versus).

3. ut nēmō: this seems slight praise if we compare l. 8, below; but chap. 6 makes it clear that Nepos means to praise highly the oratory of Epaminondas.

3. nēmō Thēbānus: see on ut nēmō, etc., p. 42, l. 19.

4. neque: and to be sure not; see on post, p. 28, l. 15.

4. concinnus: apt. Three examples of these apt replies follow.

6. Habuit, etc.: he had in one Meneclīdes, also a Theban, an unfair critic (obtrēctātōrem) and political (in administrandā rē pūblicā, lit. in the performance of public affairs) opponent.

6. indidem Thēbīs = et ipsum Thēbānum; Thēbīs simply defines more clearly indidem, and is a rare use of the abl. of source (G. 244 b; H. 415).

8. ut Thēbānum scīlicet: that is, for a Theban.

10. flōrēre: as in p. 1, l. 3.

12. illīus imperātōris: of him as general.

13. ille: Epaminondas.

13. verbō: i.e., pāx or ōtium as he immediately calls it.

16. eā diūtinā: i.e., pāce diūtinā, long-continued peace, or trans. diūtinā as an adverb.

17. Quārē: here he turns to the Thebans.

18. castrīs, etc.: castrīs is the abl. following ūtor, vobīs is dat of the agent; you must live in camp: in this contrast, of course, wrestling, or the wrestling ground, is typical of peace, as the camp is of war.

19. cum: begin the trans. with this word; the conclusion of the sentence begins with at ille.

19. obiceret: this has for its object first the clause quod . . . habēret . . . dīxisset, secondly the noun īnsolentiam.

21. quod . . . cōnsecūtus: because he fancied (sibi vidērētur, lit. seemed to himself) that he had attained Agamemnon's glory in war; cf. for the gen. bellī, invidiae crīmine, p. 32, l. 12. Agamemnon was the commander-in-chief of the Greeks in their expedition against Troy.

22. cōnsecūtus: sc. esse.

22. Meneclīda: the vocative of a Greek noun in ēs of the first declension.

24. Habēbāt . . . suspīciōnem = was suspected.

25. Quod . . . putās: in thinking: lit. as to the fact that you think (G. 333 a; H. 516, note; p. 289, footnote 1).

26. falleris: reflexively; cf. exercēbātur, p. 43, l. 17.

Page 47. 3. Lacedaemoniīs fugātīs: the battle of Leuctra, 371.

4. Īdem cum, etc.: the conclusion begins in l. 16 below with huic; its principal verb is dīxit, before which, because of the length of the sentence, Epaminondas is inserted, though īdem as subject has been used before.

4. conventum: the public assembly, called in Arcadia οἱ μύριοι.

4. Arcadum: from a nominative singular Arcas.

7. omnēs: we look for omnibus after the compound verb; a rare exception.

7. postulāret: after cum, parallel with vēnisset.

8. Atticōrum: rare for Athēniēnsium.

9. multa: a pronoun or numeral adj. in the neuter may be joined as cognate accus. with an intrans. verb (G. 238 b; H. 371, II. 2).

9. multa invēctus esset in: had made many attacks upon.

10. in iīsque: and among these attacks.

10. animum advertere = animadvertere; a complementary inf. after dēbēre.

11. dēbēre: this is in the main clause of ind. disc. depending on the idea of saying in hōc posuisset; so fuisse and nātum (esse) below.

12. ex quibus: by whom; lit. (starting) from whom.

13. Argīvōs: in the predicate; Orestem et Alcmaeonem form the subject of fuisse. Orestes slew his mother Clytemnaestra for the murder of his father Agamemnon; Alcmaeon killed his mother Eriphȳle for her traitorous conduct towards his father Amphiarāus.

14. Oedipum: for details see Classical Dictionary. Oedipus stands with the ancients as the victim of fate; for in anger he slays his father, not knowing him, and later being made king of Thebes as a reward for a good act, marries unwittingly his own mother, the widow of the late king.

16. huic: indirect object of respondendō.

16. dē cēterīs: on the other points.

17. duo: in reality one reproach, but referring to two peoples, Argives and Thebans.

18. rhētoris: in a scornful sense, speechmaker.

18. quī: since he.

22. lēgātī: when he was ambassador, in apposition with ēius. This antedates in time what precedes in the text by about eight years. An effort in 371 to bring about a general peace resulted in a continuance of hostilities between Sparta and Thebes alone; this speech of Epaminondas caused the allies of Sparta to give more reluctant obedience, and after the battle of Leuctra to revolt.

Page 48. 3. Fuisse: sc. eum, i.e., Epaminondas, for subject.

4. sē patriae īrāscī: this clause serves as subject accus. with esse, while nefās is in predicate apposition with it. On the thought compare the very different action of Alcibiades (Alc. 4, 617).

4. dūceret: see G. 341 d, Rem.; H. 516, II. 1.

7. cūius errōre: through whose blunder.

9. locōrum: omit in translating.

10. dēsīderārī coepta est: the passive of coepī is used when its complementary inf. is passive (G. 143 a; H. 297, 1).

11. dīligentia: the careful leadership.

11. prīvātus: i.e., one holding no official position, civil or military.

11. numerō mīlitis: as a common soldier; numerō is an abl. of quality, cf. p. 61, l. 17, sacrilegōrum numerō habērī.

12. nūllam adhibuit memoriam: freely, he stifled all resentment, lit. admitted no remembrance.

14. hōc: i.e., overlooked slights put on him by his fellow-citizens.

15. inlūstre: neuter to agree with some such phrase as "what he did," serving as subject of fuit.

18. alter: one (of two always).

18. strēnuus: resolute.

19. crīminibus: cf. for meaning p. 32, l. 7.

19. in invidiam vēnissent: had become unpopular, lit. had come into the ill-will (of their fellow-citizens).

21. praetōrēs: see on p. 5, l. 8.

22. idemque: the order of construction is persuāsit conlēgīs ut facerent idem. The account is inaccurate; the period for which Epaminondas and his colleagues had been elected had expired, and he retained his office simply in order that he might not lose a favorable opportunity. The law mentioned in § 5 applies to this.

25. fēcisset: representing the fut. perf. of dir. disc.

27. sī quis: whoever, lit. if any one.

Page 49. 1. retinuisset: quoted from the law, which would use the fut. perf. indic.

1. foret: esset.

3. lātam: sc. esse; had been passed.

3. ad perniciem cīvitātis cōnferre: to apply (it) to the state's hurt, as he would have done by complying with the law.

4. quattuor mēnsibus: abl. expressing the degree of difference.

6. reditum est: impersonal in pass. as all intransitives; trans. with act. and personal subject they.

7. Quibus: but these; see on cūius generis, p. 1, l. 7.

8. omnem causam: the whole responsibility.

9. factum: sc. esse; this has for its subject accus. the clause ut lēgī nōn oboedīrent; trans. freely from suaque though oboedīrent: that their disobedience to the law was due to his influence, lit. that it was done through his labor that they did not obey the law.

11. respōnsūrum: sc. esse; would defend himself, i.e., would appear before the court.

11. quod: because.

11. quid dīceret: an indirect question, representing quid dīcam, a deliberative subjunct. in the mind of Epaminondas (G. 334 b; 358 a; H. 523, II. 1, note).

11. nōn habēret: did not know, lit. have; the subjunct. as it represents the thought of the people.

13. crīminī: dat. of purpose (G. 233; H. 384, 1 [3]).

14. recūsāvit: see group CAV-.

14. neque recūsāvit quō minus . . . subīret: and did not refuse to submit to the legal penalty; quō minus . . . subīret (G.

331 e, 2; H. 497, II) may be replaced by subīre, which corresponds to the English idiom.

16. ab īīs: from his judges.

19. sē: irregular for eum.

20. aspicere: emphatic, to look in the eye; an idle claim, for they had faced the Spartans with especial bravery in the Corinthian war, particularly at Coronēa. They had not without allies offered battle to the Spartans before Leuctra.

22. in lībertātem vindicāvit: set free, lit. claimed into freedom.

23. ut Spartam oppūgnārent: Sparta was not threatened in this way till just before the battle of Mantinēa (362).

24. sī salvī esse possent: if they could but be unmolested.

25. neque . . . dēstitit: sc. quod; it is parallel with the other quod clauses above.

Page 50. 1. restitūtā Messēnē: Sparta had overpowered Messene and made Helots of its citizens. Epaminondas freed these Messenian Helots and rebuilt the city of Messene, to which he brought the descendants of old-time Messenian fugitives then living in Messana in Sicily. Arcadia also revolted from Sparta after this campaign.

1. urbem eōrum: i.e., Sparta.

1. obsidiōne: Messene and Arcadia with Argos, which already was a foe of Sparta, invested the city with a ring of enemies, so that it might be said to be in a state of siege.

2. rīsus omnium cum hilaritāte coörtus est: all broke into a hearty laugh, lit. laughter of all with joy arose.

4. iūdiciō capitis: a trial for his life, cf. p. 48, l. 26, lēx . . . quae morte multābat; see on capitis, p. 8, l. 2.

6. Hīc: Epaminondas.

6. extrēmō tempore: finally.

7. cum: begin with this word; cf. p. 1, l. 17.

8. audācius: too boldly; cf. līberius, Them., p. 9, l. 7.

8. ūnīus: with ēius; the order and separation of the words make ūnīus especially emphatic.

9. sitam: (sc. esse, inf.) from sinō, depends on putābant.

9. ūniversī . . . fēcērunt: Nepos makes a sudden change of subject from hīc (Epaminondas) to Lacedaemoniis: from the way in which the sentence begins we should look for a passive verb here with hīc for its subject.

9. in ūnum: i.e., in (eum) ūnum.

12. sparō: this was not a weapon used by regular troops; it consisted of a wooden shaft with an iron point to which was joined a hook-shaped blade running out into a point. (See Fig. 23.)

FIG. 23. SPARUM.

12. ēminus: note the derivation and consult group MAN-.

14. neque tamen: and yet . . . not, neque = et nōn.

15. repūgnantēs: a substantive.

17. simulque: sc. animadverteret.

17. ferrum: literally here of the iron head of the weapon, as is shown by the next line.

18. animam . . . ēmīssūrum: sc. sē for subject; the clause depends on the animadverteret supplied after simulque; that he would die (send away his life) immediately.

19. usque eō: usque ad id tempus.

23. In quō cum reprehenderētur, etc.: when Pelopidas criticised him for this (in quō), because . . ., Pelopidas who had . . ., and said that, etc. The subject is suddenly changed from Epaminondas the subject of reprehenderētur to Pelopidas the subject of dīceret; the clause quī . . . īnfāmem is parenthetical.

Page 51. 1. patriae cōnsulere: note the difference in meaning between cōnsulō with dat. and with the accus.

2. tālem ex tē nātum: as object, such a son; so below ex mē nātam: as my daughter.

2. relictūrus sīs: a relative clause expressing reason; cf. intuērentur, p. 15, l. 19.

4. Leuctricam: adj.; trans. by the gen. of the noun; cf. pūgna Marathōnia, p. 6, l. 24.

5. sit: ut omitted in a purpose clause following a verb of necessity, necesse est.

6. Quō tempore: at the time when, viz., 379. Cf. Pelop. 2 ff.

10. malōs: object of both dēfendere and impūgnāre; Nepos means those Thebans who had betrayed the city into the hands of the Spartans.

11. suōrum: i.e., of his fellow-citizens.

12. cīvīlem: gained over fellow-citizens.

12. Īdem: see on īdem, p. 17, l. 15.

16. ībit īnfītiās: will deny, lit. go to a denial as if to a place, expressing limit of motion; see group FA-.

17. nātum: a participle, but here and in similar places trans. by a noun birth.

18. perpetuō: do not join with imperiō.

18. pāruisse: not that they were subject to others, but they belonged to a league led by others.

21. plūris: gen. of indefinite value (G. 252 a; H. 404).

PELOPIDAS.

SYNOPSIS. — The Lacedaemonians seize the citadel of Thebes, place the control of affairs in the hands of their friends, drive into exile Pelopidas and the other leaders of the opposing faction (1). Pelopidas forms a conspiracy at Athens and returns to Thebes (2). He frees Thebes (3). The services for which his country owes him alone gratitude, and those in which he shares the glory with Epaminondas (4). His death in battle while fighting gloriously in Thessaly (5).

CHRONOLOGY. — 382 : The Lacedaemonians seize the Cadmēa. 379 : Thebes is set free. 371 : Battle of Leuctra. 370 f. : Pelopidas and Epaminondas invade Peloponnēsus. 369 f. : Pelopidas makes war for the first time on Alexander of Pherae. Being sent as an ambassador to him, Pelopidas is thrown into prison ; is freed by Epaminondas. 367 : He goes to the Persian king. 364 : He falls in Thessaly.

Page 52. 1. Pelopidās, Thēbānus, etc. : see on p. 9, l. 1, for the beginning ; magis . . . nōtus is here appended to the title.

1. historicīs : students of history, usually an adj.

1. volgō : to the general public.

2. Cūius . . . incipiam : I am in doubt how fully to describe his exploits, for I fear, if I begin to give a complete account.

4 ēnārrāre : this word implies completeness of detail.

5. summās : sc. rēs, chief points.

6. Graecārum litterārum : object. gen. depending on rudibus (G. 218 a ; H. 399, I. 2).

6. nē . . . appāreat : parallel with nē . . . videam, depending on vereor.

7. utrīque reī occurram : strive to meet both difficulties.

8. satietātī : weariness.

9. īgnōrantiae : Nepos uses this in no objectionable sense.

10. Olynthum: after the Peloponnesian war the Olynthians formed a league for the protection of the Chalcidic cities against the Thracians and Macedonians. The Spartans broke up this league in 383.

11. per Thēbās: through Theban country, not the city itself.

12. occupāvit: do not trans. occupied; see group CAP-.

13. paucōrum Thēbānōrum: lit. of a few Thebans; really it means the party of the few, i.e., οἱ ὀλίγοι the oligarchical party.

13. adversāriae factiōnī: consequently this was the party of the people.

15. nōn pūblicō: i.e., the state had not bidden him do this. Xenophon represents that it was against the wish of Agesilaus that Phoebidas escaped the punishment of death.

17. neque eō magis: yet none the more on that account.

18. susceptīs inimīcitiīs . . . eōs: having incurred their enmity they thought it better for them (eōs = Thebans).

19. obsidērī: to be kept in a state of siege; as in obsidiōne tenērī of Athens, p. 33, l. 16. This was not a condition of actual blockade, but the presence of the Spartans in the Cadmēa was a constant menace.

Page 53. 1. dēvīctās: the overthrow, see on nātum, p. 51, l. 17.

1. cum Thēbānīs sibi rem esse: they had to do with the Thebans, lit. affair was to them with, etc. Cf. sibi cum iīs, etc., p. 14, l. 3.

3. adversus: adv. strengthening the idea in resistere.

4. potestātēs: positions of authority.

4. dederant: the pluperf. is used with reference to the time of the freeing of Thebes; cf. the pluperf. crēverat and pepererat, p. 37, l. 2, and 4.

5. partim . . . aliōs: we should expect either partim . . . partim, or aliōs . . . aliōs.

6. hīc: our.

7. pulsus patriā carēbat: had been banished and was now living in exile.

8. nōn quō sequerentur ōtium: not in order to indulge in ease; quō = ut eō (G. 317 b, note 2; H. 497, II).

9. ex proximō: i.e., locō; from the closest vicinity. As twenty-four years before, the overthrow of the Athenian (30) tyrants had been effected from Thebes as the base of operations, so now Athens served the deliverers of Thebes.

9. locum: this is attracted into the relative clause; otherwise the clause would appear ut eō (locō) quem ex proximō fors obtulisset.

10. obtulisset: subjunct. as it gives the thought of the exiles. Cf. esset, p. 16, l. 21.

10. recuperāre, note the force of re-.

11. cum: as soon as.

11. reī gerendae: for action, to act; cf. p. 38, l. 9.

14. eum: join with diem; it gains emphasis from its position and makes more evident the connection of the following relative clause.

14. māximī magistrātūs: these were called Polemarchs in Thebes. Two of these, whose term of office was about to expire, were invited to dine by Phyllidas their secretary, who was one of the conspirators. See Grote, Part II, chap. lxxvii.

16. tam: this qualifies tenuī.

17. Nam duodecim adulēscentulī: for (only) twelve young men (altogether); the diminutive (adulēscentulī) seems employed to heighten the contrast between the overthrowing party and the overthrown.

19. cum: while.

20. centum: probably this included confederates in Thebes; other writers make the total number as high as 300.

20. Quā paucitāte . . . potentia: turn about and trans. these few dealt a telling blow (percussa) to the power of the Lacedaemonians, lit. the power of the L. was shaken by, etc.; paucitās is for paucī.

22. nōn magis . . . quam: trans, with emphasis on the second member, not merely . . . but; see on the same words, p. 26, l. 9.

24. quōrum imperī māiestās: whose (= and their) splendid empire, lit. the splendor of the power of whom.

25. neque ita, etc.: see note on post, etc., p. 28. l. 15.

25. ab hōc initiō : as a result of this beginning.

26. igitur : to resume our story.

Page 54. 1. dux : this was not Pelopidas, but Mellon.

2. vesperāscente caelō : as the sky was becoming dark, i.e., at nightfall.

3. exiērunt : Nepos seems to have forgotten his words cum . . . exīssent above.

3. rētia (rēte) : this term ordinarily refers to the large nets with which sportsmen surrounded a large tract of ground before the beating of the cover for game began. The object of doing this was to prevent the game from scattering in the open country when started up by the dogs from its hiding.

5. studuerant : sc. pervenīre.

6. tempus et diēs : reverse in trans. the day and hour.

8. Hōc locō : cf. p. 23, l. 18.

8. libet : notice this is not licet ; sc. mihi.

8. sēiūnctum ab rē prōpositā : foreign to the subject I am narrating, lit. separated from the matter placed before (us), i.e., the life of Pelopidas.

9. quantae calamitātī : how disastrous, lit. for how great loss.

12. usque eō dēspexērunt : paid so little heed to it, lit. disdained it to such a point ; usque eō is not temporal here.

13. labōrārint : gave themselves the trouble.

13. Accessit etiam quod : there was another circumstance which still more ; accessit = it was added.

17. profectiōne eōrum : i.e., exsulum.

18. accubantī : sc. eī ind. obj. of esset data. In very early times both the Greeks and Romans sat at table, but later the oriental custom of reclining was introduced. Couches were placed before the tables, and the guests reclined on them in such a way that the left arm rested on a cushion. (See Fig. 24.)

19. sīcut erat sīgnāta: with seal unbroken.

22. Quibus . . . cōnfectīs, volgō . . . vocātō: render the two abls. abs. by a clause beginning with after, and connect them by and.

Page 55. 1. auctōrēs: those of the Theban oligarchical party who suggested to Phoebidas the seizure of the citadel, and all who supported them.

1. Cadmēae occupandae: gerundive construction; see on exercitūs, p. 38, l. 6.

3. suprā: cf. Epam. 10, 3.

5. Itaque haec, etc.: so the glory of having freed Thebes is Pelopidas' own.

6. ferē: for the most part.

8. imperātōre: Epaminondas was the commander-in-chief of the entire army; Pelopidas was the leader of a division, the so-called "Sacred Band" (ἱερὸς λόχος), which was trained and maintained at the cost of the state.

9. prōstrāvit: from prōsternō.

10. perīculīs: i.e., of Epaminondas.

11. oppūgnāvit: the subject is Epaminondas.

11. tenuit: the subject is Pelopidas.

12. quōque: and in order that.

12. in Persās: to Persia; the people put for the place, as often in Latin.

13. altera: the second; haec should be translated as if masculine.

14. proxima: very close.

16. Cōnflictātus est: a deponent verb, a frequentative of cōnflīgō; he had a hard struggle.

20. quod: which (to be sure).

21. cōnsuēsset: from cōnsuēscō; subjunct. as it gives the thought of Pelopidas; cf. obtulisset, p. 53, l. 10.

21. tyrannō: see on tyrannus, p. 8, l 17. Pelopidas first went to Thessaly in 369; he succeeded in lessening Alexander's power and extending Theban influence in Thessaly and Macedonia.

24. Post id factum: the outrage by Alexander mentioned in § 1.

Page 56. 1. tyrannōs: i.e., Alexander, his family and partisans.

2. summa: the chief command.

3. dubitāvit: hesitate, the usual meaning when it is followed by a complementary infinitive.

6. ā: from.

7. cōnfossus: from cōnfodiō.

7. secundā vīctōriā: abl. abs. giving the time of concidit, in the moment of victory, lit. as victory was following.

11. dōnārunt: for dōnāvērunt, presented, as always when followed by the acc. of recipient and abl. of thing received.

AGESILĀUS.

SYNOPSIS. — Agesilāus gets the throne but not without a struggle (1). He sets out to free Asia; he faithfully abides by a truce he makes with the Persians (2). Both in arms and in strategy he vanquishes the Persians (3). Summoned home because of the Corinthian war, he obeys and defeats his enemies at Coronēa (4). Far from boasting of his victories, he laments the unhappy state of Greece (5). After the battle of Leuctra he saves Sparta from destruction (6). He helps his distressed country by all means in his power; he lives very plainly (7). The Egyptians look with scorn upon his ill-shaped body and simplicity of dress. He dies on his way home from Egypt (8).

CHRONOLOGY. — 442: Birth of Agesilāus. 399: He becomes king. 396 f.: He wages war in Asia. 394: He is victor at Coronēa. 371: The battle of Leuctra. 370: Epaminondas first invades Laconia. 366: Agesilāus helps Ariobarzānes. 362: Epaminondas threatens Sparta a second time, then loses his life at Mantinēa. 361–358: Agesilāus helps the Egyptian Tachus, also Nectenebides II; he dies on his way home.

2. Sōcraticō: a pupil of Socrates, lit. pertaining to Socrates.

2. conlaudātus: warmly praised; con = cum, which, as a prefix, sometimes adds emphasis.

3. eō enim ūsus est, etc.: for he lived on most intimate terms with him.

6. Lacedaemoniīs: dative, so not to be taken with māiōribus.

6. ut . . . habērent: a substantive clause of result defining mōs (G. 332 a; H. 501, I, 2).

7. nōmine magis quam imperiō: (kings) in name rather than in power; abl. of specification.

8. Proclī: gen. from Proclēs; see on Neoclī, p. 9, l. 1.

8. quī prīncipēs . . . rēgēs fuērunt: who were the first kings.

9. ex alterā in alterīus familiae locum: i.e., both kings could not come from the descendants of one of these kings.

10. fierī: sc. rēgem.

11. ratiō habēbātur: it was taken into account, lit. reckoning was had.

12. quī . . . esset: this is apparently an indirect question, but quī as a substantive standing for quis is very unusual.

13. dēcessisset: subjunctive representing the thought of the one who framed the law; so relīquisset and esset below; cf. obtulisset, p. 53, l. 10; hence not to be translated as pluperfect.

15. Mortuus est: from morior; in the year 397.

16. nātum: at his birth.

17. āgnōrat = āgnōverat, had acknowledged; ad + [g]nōscō, in which ad is intensive; see group GNA-, GNO-.

17. eundem: the subject of esse; trans. but . . . he.

17. moriēns: on his death-bed.

19. cōnsecūtus: this differs from sequor; see the group SEC-.

Page 58. 1. suffrāgante: by the support of, in abl. abs. An oracle had bidden the Spartans beware of a "lame reign," which seemed to end Agesilaus' chances, as he was lame; but Lysander convinced the Spartans that the oracle meant them to beware of the reign of one not really belonging to the line of Heracles' descendants.

1. suprā: i.e., in the life of Lysander by Nepos.

4. Hīc: Agesilāus.

4. imperī: the gen. occasionally occurs with potior instead of the abl. (G. 223 a; H. 410, V, 3).

6. rēgī: dat. of ind. obj.; bellum facerent = rēgī bellum inferrent.

7. dīmicārī: that the fighting should take place; a passive, impersonally used, is often best translated with a noun as subject derived from the meaning of the verb itself, and followed by any appropriate English verb: e.g., pūgnātur, the battle rages.

8. exercitūs: acc. plur. = cōpiās as often in Nepos.

9. potestāte: i.e., to go to Asia and make war on the king.

11. profectum: sc. esse; Nepos regularly omits esse of the fut. act. inf. and often of the perf. pass. inf.

12. imprūdentēs: see group. VID-.

13. offenderet: come upon, lit. strike upon.

13. praefectōs: a more general term than satrapae, governors of provinces, to which, however, it is sometimes equivalent.

15. Lacōne: the Lacedaemonian (king), i.e., Agesilāus.

15. sē dare operam ut . . . convenīret: that he was exerting himself to arrange matters between the Lacedaemonians and the king; convenīret is used impersonally, that it might come together to the Lacedaemonians, etc.

16. rē autem vērā: but really.

17. ad . . . comparandās: these words motify petīvit indūtiās, and show his real as opposed to his pretended purpose.

18. trimestrēs: an adj., but render for three months.

18. Iūrāvit: see group IVG- or IV-.

20. contrā ea = contrā, adv., as often in Nepos.

20. nihil aliud: sc. ēgit.

21. comparāvit: this is simply a strengthened parō; see on conlaudātus, p. 57, l. 2.

22. in eō = in iūreiūrandō cōnservandō, trans. by so doing.

24. suīs rēbus: from him, lit. from his affairs.

25. conservātā religiōne: by keeping his oath.

26. deum (= deōrum) nūmen facere sēcum: the blessing of the gods was theirs, lit. made with them; sē and sibi refer to Agesilāus and his men, not to Agesilāus only.

27. conciliārī: depends on animadverteret, and is parallel with facere.

Page 59. 3. diēs: this does not always refer to a period of twenty-four hours.

3. barbarus: i.e., Tissaphernes.

4. domicilia: castles.

6. eō potissimum: on that place rather than any other.

6. hostēs impetum factūrōs: an accus. and inf. to be joined closely with dubitāns, following the construction used in Nepos. See on nōn dubitāns, p. 4, l. 9.

9. usquam movēret: made any move at all.

13. armārentur: reflexive; so also ōrnārentur.

14. prōposuit: offered.

14. quibus: abl., = ut iīs.

16. in exercitātiōnum generibus: in various exercises.

18. ōrnātissimum: this refers to their armor and equipment generally; exercitātissimum to their skill in handling themselves and their arms.

21. prōnūntiāsset: for prōnūntiāvisset; it represents the fut. perf. of dir. disc.

23. praesidiīs: i.e., bodies of troops placed here and there for purposes of defence; with occupātūrōs, would cover with their garrisons.

23. eum: sē referring to the subject of vīdit would be more regular.

24. āc: not and.

25. eandem: as before.

26. dēfendendam: sc. esse; the inf. of the second periphrastic conjugation.

26. eum opīniō fefellisset: he had been deceived in his expectation; opīniō is the subject.

1. sērō: too late; trans. like the absolute comparative; see on līberius, p. 9, l. 7.

2. illō: an adv. from ille, as eō from is.

5. numquam in campō: this is not quite accurate, as there were two minor engagements in the plain with cavalry and the Persians won both. Agesilāus won the main engagement at the Pactōlus.

7. pedestrēs cōpiae: in this instance pedestrēs is used of foot as opposed to horse; cf. p. 58, l. 8, where it is used of all land forces as opposed to naval forces.

9. versātus est: fared.

11. Hīc: pronoun.

12. domō: from home.

13. mīssū: sent by, lit. by the sending.

15. dubitāret: this formed part of the ephors' command to Agesilāus; therefore it is put in the subjunct. (G. 339; H. 523, III).

15. In hōc: on this occasion.

15. pietās: his sense of duty; the primary meaning of the word.

15. suspicienda: admired; lit. looked up to.

18. rēgnī . . . potiundī: in old Latin potior was transitive taking its object in the accus.; hence it may be used in the gerundive (passive) construction.

18. tantā modestiā: an abl. expressing the manner of dictō audiēns.

18. dictō audiēns fuit iūssīs: audiēns hearing (to) takes a dat. of ind. obj. dictō; then the phrase dictō audiēns, obedient, from its meaning may also take a dat. of ind. obj. iūssīs.

19. ut sī: as if.

20. comitiō: a part of the Roman Forum where the magistrates assembled bore this name; Nepos uses it for a similar place, the ἐφορεῖον at Sparta.

21. imperātōrēs nostrī: Julius Caesar, Antony, and Octavian were conspicuous examples of commanders in the field disregarding the commands of the Senate.

21. voluissent: the subjunct. expresses a wish (G. 267 b; 483, 1).

22. illūc: to our story.

24. quam: than.

Page 61. 1. superāsset: for superāvisset; the conclusion of these conditions, pārŭisset, etc., lies in glōriōsius, (it would be) more glorious; the pluperf. subjunct. then stands for the fut. perf. indic. in his thought.

1. Hellēspontum: object of trā- (trāns) in trāiēcit.

3. ut quod iter = ut id iter quod, etc.

3. annō vertente: in the course of a year, lit. a year turning; Nepos not only disagrees with others, but is inconsistent with himself in this statement ; cf. Them. 5, 2, where he gives the time of Xerxes' march as six months ; we know from other writers that it was four months.

4. cum : this was in the year 394.

5. obsistere eī : to stop him, lit. make stand against him.

8. vel : this strengthens the superlative.

8. plērīque ex fugā : many fugitives, lit. many from flight.

10. iīs : with these (G. 244 d ; H. 415, III, note 1).

12. omnibus : dat. after īrātus.

13. religiōnem : veneration of the gods.

14. hōc : this is explained by the clause of result (ut . . . habēret) in apposition with it.

17. sē : the subject of mīrārī.

18. numerō : as ; cf. p. 48, l. 11, the same word, with note.

18. habērī : this has eōs, the antecedent of quī, for its subject.

21. conlātum est : centered around ; from cōnferō.

23. decem mīlia : this is a great exaggeration.

23. Agēsilāō duce : a mistake on the part of Nepos ; Agesilāus had only reached Amphipolis on his way home when word of this battle was brought to him.

24. eō factō : consequently.

25. tantum āfuit . . . glōriae : so far was he from arrogant boasting, lit. from the arrogance of glory ; glōria, like the verb glōrior, often signifies boasting.

26. commiserātus sit : com- is intensive as in conlaudat, p. 21, l. 22 ; miseror implies pity which is expressed in words, misereor pity simply felt.

Page 62. 1. illā multitūdine : by means of that large number of men ; Agesilāus means that this number of Greeks (i.e., those slain in the battle) might have formed an army which would have severely punished the Persians.

2. esset : this has not been changed from direct discourse.

2. supplicium dare = poenam dare ; see on poenās datūrōs, p. 4, l. 6.

2. potuisse : this is the principal verb in ind. disc. depending on a verb of saying implied in commiserātus sit.

3. intrā moenia: viz. Corinthī.

4. hortārentur: this is parallel with compulisset; the purpose clause ut Corinthum oppūgnāret depends on it.

4. negāvit id suae virtūtī convenīre: said that it was not becoming for a man like himself (lit. his manliness, see group VIR-).

5. eum esse quī . . . cōgeret: he was a man to force (G. 320; H. 503, I).

7. nōbilissimās: most famous; see group GNO-; this is the etymological meaning of the word.

8. exstinguere: this implies complete destruction.

12. interim: in the year 371.

12. illa: the well-known.

13. quō nē proficīscerētur: quō = eō (there, thither); the clause is repeated by the inf. exīre below and the negative in nōluit.

13. cum . . . premerētur: although he was urged.

14. exitū: the (unfortunate) issue (of the campaign).

15. exīre: in trans. introduce absolutely before this word. The commander of the Spartans in the battle of Leuctra was Cleombrotus, who died on the field.

15. īdem: cf. eundem, p. 57, l. 17.

18. futūram (nōn) fuisse: the perf. inf. of the first periphrastic conjugation, lit. was (not) about to be, would have ceased to exist; it is in ind. disc. after appāruerit.

19. quidem: this simply emphasizes quō.

19. discrīmine: see group CRE-.

19. ēius cōnsilī: of his (ēius = of him) judgment.

20. adulēscentulī: the diminutive ending seems to imply contempt here.

23. quī: since he; cf. intuērentur, p. 15, l. 19.

25. vēnit: this is the principal verb with Agesilāus above as subject.

25. bonō animō: in a loyal spirit; an abl. expressing manner.

Page 63. 2. sē . . . animadvertisse: these words depend on dīxit to be supplied from laudāvit.

2. quoque: adverb.

2. id . . . debēre: these words depend on animadvertisse.

4. adiūnctīs: sc. nōnnūllīs, forming an abl. abs.; on this nōnnūllīs, dē suīs comitibus depends like a partitive genitive; cf. ex tuīs, p. 1, l. 9.

5. tūtum: predicately, the position safe.

6. commovēre: i.e., to carry out their original purpose.

7. eōque libentius: viz., sē nōn commōvērunt.

8. quae cōgitāverant = cōgitāta of p. 22, l. 6.

11. cum interim: and yet during this time, lit. when meanwhile; i.e., for the remainder of Agesilāus' life; he lived to see Sparta overthrown by Thebes and the curious fulfillment of the prophecy about the "lame reign."

13. pecūniā: the laws of Lycurgus compelled the Spartans to use iron coins only; but during the Peloponnesian war they were obliged to have coins (stamped) of gold and silver also.

14. rēge: i.e., of Persia, as the Greeks used the term βασιλεύς. Cf. the use of rēgiīs and rēgiā in p. 7, l. 18 and 20, and see note on rēgiās, p. 15, l. 17.

15. māgnā . . . pecūniā: notice that the Latin uses māgnā, not multā, as our usage would lead us to expect.

16. in hōc: in his doing so.

16. illud: join closely with quod nihil . . . contulit . . . mūtāvit the fact that he carried nothing, etc.

16. fuit admīrābile: this is the predicate of all the rest of the sentence for which illud really stands. In trans. bring in the cum (although) clause just before fuit admīrābile.

19. dē victū, etc.: he continued to live according to the simple manner of the Spartans: see on cultum, p. 22, l. 8.

20. domō eādem: hardly to be credited; probably the same sort of house will translate the idea.

21. prōgenitor: as a matter of fact Agesilāus belonged to the line of Procles' descendants, not of Eurysthenes'.

22. quam: i.e., domum.

22. intrārat: for intrāverat.

23. plūrima: sc. sīgna from sīgnum.

25. cūiusvīs inopis atque prīvātī: (from the house) of any poor private (citizen).

27. ut: as.

Page 64. 1. sīc maleficam nactus est: so he experienced her ill-will, lit. found her mischief-working.

2. nam et . . . et . . . et: for not only . . . and . . . but also; see note on et . . . et . . . et in p. 1, l. 1. The first two form together practically one characteristic of Agesilāus, the third (claudus, etc.), a second.

3. alterō pede: notice the difference in the use of the abl. between this and corpore exiguō and statūrā humilī preceding; the last two give a characteristic (quality) of the subj. of fuit and the adj. agrees with the abl., while alterō pede specifies in what respect (specification) the epithet claudus was true of the same subject.

4. Quae rēs: a circumstance which; this refers only to claudus alterō pede.

5. īgnōtī: strangers, those who did not know him; the word is used actively, not passively as usual.

5. faciem: here this word refers to the whole outer appearance.

5. contemnēbant: hardly heeded him.

7. admīrārī: sc. eum as object.

7. Quod: i.e., to be scorned by strangers.

7. eī ūsū vēnit: see on ūsū vēnerat, p. 33, l. 4.

7. annōrum octōgintā: a gen. of quality describing the subject of iisset; we should expect some appositive with the subject, e.g., as an old man of eighty.

11. neque . . . amplius: and nothing more.

11. hūc: i.e., super strāmenta.

11. eōdem: sc. strātō.

11. ut: so that.

14. nēminem: nēmō is used adjectively here, cf. p. 42, l. 19.

14. nōn beātissimōs: not very well to do.

16. ad rēgiōs: to the officers of the king, i.e., Tachus. He is also meant below in § 4; he reigned 369–361 and was overthrown by Nectenebis II. with the help of Agesilāus, whom the latter won over to his side.

18. Agesilāum: sc. a pronoun from this as subject of esse.

19. rēgis verbīs: see on suīs verbīs, p. 12, l. 11.

20. vitulīnam: sc. carnem (carō), flesh.

22. secundamque mēnsam: lit. second table or course, i.e., dessert.

4. iacēns: instead of agreeing with portum it conforms to quī which intervenes.

7. cērā: the Persian fashion of embalming.

HANNIBAL.

SYNOPSIS. — Hannibal's incomparable military ability; his implacable hatred of the Romans inherited from his father (1, 2). He makes his first campaigns in Spain; chosen commander there he vanquishes the various peoples, captures Saguntum, leads his army into Italy (3). Three times he defeats the Romans (4). He avoids the trap laid for him by Q. Fabius Maximus and does the Romans fresh injury (5). Recalled to Africa, he is defeated at Zama (6). After peace is made he continues to serve his country; at length in fear of Roman treachery he flees to Syria to Antiochus (7). He assists by his advice Antiochus making war upon the Romans (8). After the rout of Antiochus' forces, he goes to Crete, where he eludes the avarice of the Cretans (9). He goes to Prusias, king of Bithynia; he assists this king in his war with Eumenes, king of Pergamus. By his cunning Hannibal defeats Eumenes in a naval battle (10, 11). Roman embassadors demand him from the king; Hannibal takes poison and dies (12). His writings and the historians of his exploits (13).

2. quod : ordinarily we find the abl. with dē after dubitō ; neuter pronouns in the accus. form the only exceptions.

3. ut . . . superārit : (for superāverit) a result clause where an accus. and inf. would be more regular after vērum est (G. 332 f ; H. 501, I, 2).

3. īnfitiandum : prejudiced Romans might easily do this ; later several statues of Hannibal were set up at Rome.

4. cēterōs : we should expect cēteris (dat.) ; see on omnēs, p. 47, l. 7. In one tale Hannibal is represented as claiming only third place, putting Alexander the Great and Pyrrhus before himself.

6. antecēdat : this is subjunct. by attraction from its dependence on the inf. praestitisse (G. 342 ; H. 529, II).

7. congressus est . . . discessit : sc. Hannibal for subject of these. Hannibal did meet with one repulse at the hands of Marcellus when he attacked Nola, a Campanian city, in 214. This was a mere trifle compared with the long list of Hannibal's victories, but the Romans made a great deal of it.

8. Quod : therefore.

9. domī : i.e., while Hannibal was in the field. He certainly was not properly supported by his countrymen at home ; but the fact that the Romans had a number of generals who were more than a match for any Carthaginian leader other than Hannibal had much to do with his failure.

11. virtūtem : ability.

13. ergā: usually this refers to friendly feelings; we should expect in after odium.

14. dēposuerit: surrendered.

14. quī quidem . . . Rōmānīs: since, though exiled from his native land and dependent on the help of foreigners, he never abandoned his feeling of hostility for the Romans; animō bellāre: lit. to wage war in heart.

16. nam: this should introduce a proof of the preceding statement, viz. numquam dēstiterit animō bellāre, etc.; the sentence would then read nam Antiochum, quī . . . potentissimus rēx fuit . . . incendit. Nepos is so intent on emphasizing the greatness of Antiochus that he breaks up what follows nam into two sentences, leaving for the following sentence incendit, the verb which should depend directly on the nam.

16. ut omittam: not to mention, a purpose clause depending on some word understood, as dīcam, I will say (G. 317 c; H. 499, 2, note).

17. Philippum: Philip V., king of Macedon, waged two wars with the Romans (211–205; 200–195).

17. absēns: he was carrying on the war in Italy; but with Antiochus he was present in person.

18. Antiochus: Antiochus II., called the Great, was king of a large part of western Asia, but after his defeat at Thermopylae and Magnesia by the Romans, he was restricted to Syria.

Page 67. 1. rubrō marī: this term was originally applied to the Arabic Gulf (the Red Sea of to-day), to a portion of the Indian Ocean, and to the modern Persian Gulf. Later it was confined to the Arabic Gulf, but occasionally was used in its earlier sense, as it is here, of the sea between Arabia and India.

3. voluntāte: intentions.

4. ut Hannibalem . . . addūcerent: to make the king suspicious of Hannibal, lit. to draw H. into suspicion to the king; rēgī (G. 235 a; H. 384, II, 4).

5. tamquam . . . sentīre: as if he (Hannibal) had been bribed by them (and) were otherwise disposed than before.

6. neque: separate into et — nōn and repeat cum from the beginning of the sentence.

8. tempore: opportunity.

10. inquit: this is usually inserted in a direct quotation even where a verb of saying (here adiūnxit) has preceded.

11. puerulō mē: connect these words closely with proficīscēns.

11. utpote . . . nātō: since I was not more than nine years old; nātō agrees with mē.

13. optimō māximō: these are constant epithets of Jupiter in prayers and sacrifices, and are added without connective. Jupiter is here used for Baal, the Sun-God, chief deity worshipped by the Phoenicians. His name formed the second part of many Phoenician proper names, e.g., Hanni-bal (baal), Hasdru-bal (baal).

14. dīvīna rēs: religious ceremony.

14. dum cōnficiēbātur: dum usually takes the present tense even to denote past continued action.

18. fidem: oath.

20. tenentem iūrāre: i.e., tenēre āc iūrāre; the practice of grasping the altar or touching the image of the god when taking an oath may be compared to the modern practice of touching the Bible or a crucifix.

24. reliquō tempore: for the rest of my life.

26. mē cēlāris: (for cēlāveris) cēlō is usually followed by two accs., before one of which in English we must insert from; if you conceal them (viz., si quid . . . cōgitābis) from me.

26. quidem: this has oppositional force, on the other hand.

Page 68. 1. sī nōn: not nisi as nōn is emphatic.

1. in eō: in this matter, i.e., in eō parandō.

1. prīncipem: in charge.

3. quā dīximus: supply an ellipsis just as in p. 42, l. 17.

5. imperātōre: this forms a predicate with suffectō.

7. dēlātum: made known; relātum would be used of an official announcement.

7. pūblicē: in the name of the state, cf. p. 16, l. 18. They thought best not to oppose the evident wish of the army, though Hannibal was very young to hold the command.

9. annīs: the regular construction would be annōs: cf. nōn amplius novem annōs nātō, p. 67, l. 11; in this instance we have an abl. of comparison depending on minor; in the former case an accus. expressing duration of time with nātō. Others state that Hannibal was 26 years old at this time.

10. omnēs gentēs Hispāniae: he remained south of the Ebro to abide by the conditions of a treaty Hasdrubal had made with the Romans; he crossed it first after the taking of Saguntum, with which began the Second Punic War.

11. foederātam: i.e., with the Romans.

12. Ex hīs ūnum, etc.: he sent 20,000 to Africa, left 45,000 in Spain, and began his march with 50,000 infantry and 9000 horse.

19. Grāium: trans. Graian here and below, for the word originated in the locality and has nothing to do with Greek. Many Gauls had crossed the Alps before Hannibal, to settle in Italy. The chief difficulties of the way were caused by the hostility of the natives and the lateness of the season (September) when he began his march.

20. is: this agrees with its predicate noun saltus.

22. mūniit: do not translate fortified.

22. ōrnātus: this is in contrast with inermis below. Elephants carried towers.

23. īre: contrast with rēpere by emphasizing both.

26. Cōnflīxerat: an unimportant cavalry battle which the Romans won took place at the mouth of the Rhone.

Page 69. 2. Clastidī: probably Nepos refers to the battle of Ticīnus; Hannibal took Clastidium later.

FIG. 26. — LECTICA.

5. utrōsque: this is rarely used in the plural of two individuals.

6. per Ligurēs: the people put for the country; see on in Persās, p. 55, l. 12.

10. lectīcā: a mode of conveyance borrowed from the East. (See Fig. 26.)

11. circumventum occīdit: see on abreptōs mīsērunt, p. 4, l. 24.

13. saltūs occupantem: in possession of the mountain passes. He was sent by Servilius with the cavalry to the help of Flaminius and was defeated in Umbria.

14. Hinc in Āpūliam, etc.: from here to 5, 3, N. has not followed the proper order of events; see chronology for events from 217 to 208 inclusive.

16. ūnō proeliō: i.e., Cannae.

16. Paulum: the cognomen of the L. Aemilius just mentioned.

20. Hāc pūgnā pūgnātā = post hanc pūgnam.

20. Rōmam: really five years later (211) than the battle of Cannae.

24. Hīc: adverb.

25. locōrum: omit in trans.

Page 70. 1. dedit verba: a colloquial phrase, gave (nothing but) words, deceived, cheated.

1. obductā nocte: sc. caelō, under cover of the night, lit. night being drawn over (the sky).

3. ēius generis: i.e., of cattle with bundles of burning fagots tied to their horns.

4. obiectō vīsū: abl. abs. expressing cause.

5. iniēcit: Hannibal is its subject.

6. vāllum: it was the constant practice with Roman armies to throw up a rampart and establish a fortified camp wherever they passed a night.

8. parī āc dictātōrem imperiō = parī imperiō āc dictātor fuit; parī imperiō is an abl. of quality, and dictātōrem is attracted into the same case as magistrum. This was due to the dissatisfaction of the populace with the cautious policy of Fabius; it was, however, illegal and also did away with the supposed advantage of the dictatorship, which concentrated the chief power in the hands of one person, over the consulship, in which the power was divided between two. The magister equitum was the chief subordinate of the dictator.

10. iterum cōnsulem: this should read (Gracchum) bis cōnsulem and below Marcellum quīntum cōnsulem, for Gracchus was killed after the expiration of his second, Marcellus during his fifth consulship.

10. in Lūcānīs: join with sustulit; see on per Ligurēs, p. 69, l. 6.

10. absēns: i.e., through his brother Mago.

13. Longum est: it would be tedious, an expression of propriety taking the indicative in Latin, but trans. as if the subjunct. (G. 311 c).

14. ex quō: ut ex eō.

15. quamdiū . . . posuit: he was not defeated in Italy (if we accept Nola). The rest of the statement is absurd.

18. dēfēnsum: cf. dēlīberātum, p. 1, l. 10.

18. revocātus: 203.

19. P. Scīpiōnem: i.e., P. Cornēlius Scīpiō, to which the agnomen Africānus was added after his defeat of Hannibal. He conquered all Spain between 210 and 206. In 204 he went over to Africa from Sicily and won a great battle near Utica, which occasioned the recall of Hannibal.

22. impraesentiārum: an adverb equivalent to in praesentiā, p. 8, l. 6; a colloquial expression probably from in praesentiā rērum.

23. bellum compōnere: cf. bellum compositūrum, p. 37, l. 20.

24. In conloquium convēnit, etc.: a conference is agreed upon; on terms they did not agree (lit. terms did not meet).

25. Post id factum: after this took place, lit. after this deed.

26. Zamam: this was southwest of Carthage. It is thought that Naraggara, which lay fifty miles to the west of Zama, was the scene of the battle; the armies had encamped there prior to the colloquy. Hadrumētum was not over one hundred miles from Zama, one hundred and fifty from Naraggara; hence the statement trecenta mīlia is an exaggeration.

Page 71. abest ab Zamā: ab is used even with names of towns when the distance from one place to another is stated.

8. ācerrimē occupātus: most actively engaged.

9. bellum composuērunt: the Carthaginians agreed to give up all their war vessels except ten, to pay two hundred talents yearly for fifty years, and never to make war without Rome's permission.

10. rēs gessit: waged war.

11. usque ad cōnsulēs: the Romans frequently designated a year by its consuls, omitting et where the praenōmina of the men were indicated (as in this instance), using it where these were omitted (e.g., Pompēiō et Crassō cōnsulibus). The phrase may always be trans. to the consulship of (ad), in the consulship of (abl. abs.).

12. Hīs enim magistrātibus: during their term of office, an abl. abs.

14. quī . . . grātiās agerent: to thank; distinguish between this phrase, in which grātiās is always plural, and grātiam habēre, to be grateful, and grātiam referre, to return a favor, to requite.

15. cum iīs: for sēcum, referring to the subject of vēnērunt, viz., the embassadors who surely ought to have identified themselves with the Carthaginians at home who had sent them.

16. dōnārent; peterent: these are in the same construction as agerent, having quī for subject.

16. eōs: i.e., the Romans.

17. obsidēs eōrum: for suī obsidēs; see above on cum iīs.

17. Fregellīs: at Fregellae, a city of Latium on the river Liris.

18. ex senātūs cōnsultō: cf. ex pactō, p. 2, l. 21.

19. acceptum: welcome, an adj.

20. quō locō rogārent, futūrōs: for eō locō futūrōs quō ut essent rogārent, freely trans. in the place they asked to have them.

20. remīssūrōs: the subject is sē to be supplied from respōnsum est = respondērunt.

21. cūius operā: at whose instigation, cf. p. 35, l. 24.

26. rēx: the Carthaginian title was suffete.

26. postquam: this takes the pluperfect when a definite measure of time is joined with it. Bring in annō . . . vīcēsimō before the postquam clause.

Page 72. 1. quotannīs annuī bīnī rēgēs: two kings each year holding office for a year.

2. parī . . . āc: just such . . . as.

4. ut: trans. before nōn sōlum.

5. ex foedere: see ex senātūs cōnsultō in § 3.

6. superesset: might be (something) over.

8. ratus: from reor; trans. by a causal clause. Some perf. participles of deponent verbs do not differ in meaning from the pres. act., e.g., ratus; arbitrātus, ūsus, veritus, etc.

9. suī: genitive of the reflexive pronoun; suī exposcendī grātiā: to demand his surrender; lit. for the sake of demanding him from (them).

9. senātus: i.e., an audience of the senate.

11. Antiochum: see on p. 66, l. 18.

12 possent: (G. 341, b; H. 529, 1, note 1).

14. iūdicārunt: declared.

15. postquam . . . profūgerat: see on postquam, p. 71, l. 26.

18. sī: whether; see on possent, l. 12, above; it introduces an indir. quest. and we must in trans. supply in order to see, before sī.

18. Antiochī spē fīdūciāque: their hope and confidence in Antiochus. Antiochī is object. genitive.

20. exercitibus = cōpiīs as often in Nepos.

21. excīvit: from excieō.

22. absentem: i.e., they did not wait for him to return to Carthage and appear before a court.

23. illī: begin the sentence with cum.

23. solvissent nāvēs: in this instance trans. had weighed anchor.

25. duplex memoria prōdita est: two accounts are given.

3. ēius: i.e., Hannibalis.

3. quam in suscipiendō īnstituerat: as he had done at the outset in undertaking it.

4. propius Tiberī: propius Tiberim would be more usual.

4. Thermopylīs: the Romans defeated Antiochus here in 191.

8. Rhodiōrum: Rhodes, a powerful state since the end of the Peloponnesian war, was in a league with Rome against Philip III. of Macedon and Antiochus; the superiority of the Rhodians over the Syrians was due to skill, not to numbers.

10. rem gessit = pūgnāvit.

12. fugātō: this occurred at Magnesia in western Asia Minor in 190. In the terms of the peace that was concluded Antiochus was compelled to agree to surrender Hannibal.

12. quod: something which.

13. suī fēcisset potestātem: cf. p. 60, l. 5.

13. Crētam: a large island with which we should expect a preposition. Nepos is very free in his use of the accus. alone expressing limit of motion; cf. Chersonēsum, p. 1, l. 7.

14. ibī: i.e., in Crete.

14. quō: an interrogative adverb.

15. vir omnium callidissimus: (this) shrewdest of men; cf. ācerrimī virī, p. 33, l. 21.

16. nisi quid prōvīdisset: unless he should take measures of precaution.

19. Amphorās: these were jugs or jars of various sizes from quite small to very large, used mostly for keeping liquids. They had two handles (hence their name), were generally pointed below, and so were either leaned against the wall or buried in the ground. (See Fig. 27.)

Fig. 27. — Amphorae.

20. summās: adj., sc. amphorās (G. 193; H. 440, note 2).

21. prīncipibus: leading men; (cf. p. 16, l. 8). Crete was a republic.

25. abicit: as if of no value.

27. tolleret, dūceret: sc. an object from amphorās.

Page 74. 1. Poenus: both Carthaginians and Cretans were reputed very clever among ancient nations.

2. Prūsiam: this king of Bithynia had been allied with Rome in the Syrian war, but receiving no return for his services he invited Hannibal to his court. His weak and incapable son surrendered Hannibal to the Romans.

3. neque aliud . . . ēgit quam: cf. p. 58, l. 20.

5. domesticīs: his own, i.e., unsupported he was no match for Rome.

6. conciliābat: with this and adiungēbat below sc. Prūsiae, to whom also ab eō refers.

10. quō = itaque eō.

11. utrobīque: i.e., et marī et terrā.

12. remōvisset: this represents a fut. perf. indic. of dir. disc.

14. tālem iniit ratiōnem: hit upon the following way.

15. superābātur: Hannibal by Eumenes.

16. Imperāvit . . . conligī: more regularly we should have ut conligerentur with imperō; so also conicī = ut conicerentur.

19. effēcisset = conlēgisset; cf. use of confēcerat, p. 44, l. 16.

21. omnēs ut: this order emphasizes omnēs; the usual order = ut omnēs.

22. ā cēterīs . . . dēfendere: be satisfied merely to defend themselves from the rest.

23. illōs . . . cōnsecūtūrōs: sc. esse; "he said" is to be understood from praecipit; cf. p. 1, l. 15, prōspera futūra.

24. Rēx . . . factūrum: the clauses are arranged so as to gain emphasis; the dependence of the parts of the sentence on each other is shown by the following order: sē factūrum ut scīrent in quā nāve rēx veherētur.

25. cēpissent, interfēcissent: see on remōvisset in l. 12, above.

Page 75. 1. factā: after (lit. being made).

1. utrīsque: both parties.

2. Quārum: i.e., classium.

4. quō . . . esset: an indir. question, the object of faceret.

5. scaphā: see Fig. 28.

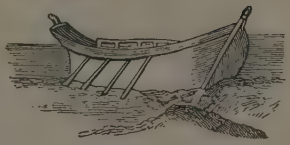

FIG. 28. — SCAPHA.

5. cadūceō: this served as does our flag of truce; it was a wand carried by heralds, etc., an emblem of the god Mercury; it was twined with serpents; see Fig. 29.

FIG. 29. CADUCEUS.

5. Quī: i.e., tabellārius.

7. professus est: from profiteor.

11. solūtā epistulā: see on vincla epistulae, p. 23, l. 13.

12. quae . . . pertinērent: which were suggestive of insult to him.

15. Hōrum: this refers to both parties.

18. quam: i.e., safety.

18. praesidia: i.e., the castra nautica, p. 76, l. 1.

22. Quae iacta: lit. which being thrown, the subject of concitārunt = concitāvērunt; trans. the throwing of these.

25. opplētās: see group PLE-.

25. novā rē perterritī: the principal clause begins with this.

Page 76. 1. puppēs vertērunt: compare the usual terga vertērunt, more applicable to land fighting.

1. castra nautica: this was a fortification built upon the shore to protect the ships while landing the crews or when drawn up on shore; it was constantly occupied by a garrison.

2. cōnsiliō: by cleverness.

4. aliās: an adv.

4. pedestribus cōpiīs: as p. 37, l. 16; opposed to the fleet.

4. prūdentiā: strategy.

6. lēgāti: it is thought that embassadors from Eumenes — who had sent them because of the war with Prusias — induced the Romans to demand Hannibal's surrender.

7. apud: at the house of, with name of a person; cf. chez in French.

7. Flāminīnum: he was consul in 198, and conquered Philip of Macedon in 197; p. 66, l. 17.

10. Patrēs cōnscrīptī = senātōrēs. After the expulsion of the kings at Rome in 510 the senate was enlarged by the admission of some who were not patricians and the assembly was called patrēs et cōnscrīptī, "fathers and the enrolled"; later the et was dropped.

11. quī: since they; hence exīstimārent is subjunctive. Cf. quī . . . intuērentur, p. 15, l. 19.

14. nē . . . sēcum habēret, sibique dēderet: not to keep with himself, but surrender to them; ut is to be supplied before dēderet from nē. Notice that suum and sibi refer to the subject of mīsērunt, but sē(cum) to the subject of habēret in its own clause.

15. Prūsia: nominative case; so we find Greek nouns in -as conforming to the Latin first declension in the ending of the nom. sing., e.g., Νικίας, Latin Niciās and Nicia.

15. negāre: to say no, without object.

16. illud recūsāvit nē . . . postulārent: (only) this much he objected to, that they should ask, etc.

16. recūsāvit: see group CAV-.

16. id . . . fierī: postulō regularly takes ut with subjunctive; cf. use of imperō, p. 74, l. 16.

16. id . . . quod adversus . . . esset: an act which was inconsistent with, etc. His idea of what guest friendship demanded of him seems merely to have kept him from murdering Hannibal either by his own hand or by the hand of a subordinate.

17. comprehenderent: a subjunct. representing an imperative of dir. disc. Cf. opus facerent, p. 14, l. 12.

18. inventūrōs: see on prōspera futūra, p. 1, l. 15.

21. habēret: the subject is a pronoun standing for Hannibal.

22. ūsū: cf. p. 33, l. 4.

24. puer: used of a slave without reference to age.

24. ab iānuā: join with prōspiciēns.

25. plūrēs praeter cōnsuētūdinem: more than usual.

27. num: whether; this in an indir. question implies nothing as regards the answer.

2. sēnsit: its subject is Hannibal.

3. petī: cf. māximē Athēniēnsēs petī dīcerentur, p. 10, l. 21.

3. neque retinendam: with a negative or vix the gerundive may express merely possibility, may or can, not must or ought.

4. Quam nē aliēnō arbitriō dīmitteret: that he might not surrender this at another's bidding.

5. virtūtum: the plural is used in view of the many brave deeds by which he had proved his virtūtem.

8. annō septuāgēsimō: this is not accurate; accepting as correct the first of the three consulships given below, he was 63 years of age. The three consulships were in the years 183, 182, 181, respectively.

8. adquiēvit: this is particularly appropriate in view of the words just preceding, multīs . . . labōribus.

9. Atticus: this was the friend of Cicero. Nepos wrote an account of his life.

11. mortuum: i.e., eum mortuum esse depending on scrīptum relīquit.

12. Polybius: 210–122. He was a famous Greek historian, who wrote a history of the world from the founding of Rome to 168.

13. Sulpicius: a contemporary of Nepos, whose work has not survived.

14. hīc tantus: a favorite combination in Latin authors, not to be trans. literally into Eng. Tantus is equivalent to an emphatic māgnus or similar word.

15. districtus: though busied on different sides; omit the -que of tantīsque in translating.

17. ad Rhodiōs: i.e., liber ad Rhodiōs. Hannibal dedicated his book to them; in the Syrian war they had been allies of Rome.

17. dē: join with rēbus gestīs.

17. Cn. Manlī Vulsōnis: he conquered the Galatians who had been allies of Antiochus in the Syrian war. The Rhodians had been allies of Rome in the war with Antiochus and so were much concerned in the peace that followed.

18. hūius: i.e., Hannibalis.

18. memoriae prōdidērunt: have described for us.

20. simul: i.e., cum eō, as in p. 34, l. 15.

22. ūsus est doctōre: had as instructor.

24. tempus est: this can be followed by the dat. nōbīs or, as here, by nōs, the subject of the inf. following.

24. hūius librī: i.e., the book dē excellentibus ducibus exterārum gentium.

25. explicāre imperātōrēs: this is instead of vītam imperātōrum; cf. p. 41, l. 12, reliquōs ordiāmur.

26. utrōrumque: i.e., of Roman and foreign leaders.

26. quī: for utrī, the Romans or foreigners. This is a rare substitution.
